"God works in all things; all obey His first propulsion from the night: Wake thou and watch!—the world is gray With morning light!"

The spectacle of a Republican ward leader of Philadelphia being sentenced to prison for five years on the eve of a Presidential election is calculated to divert some of the public attention from the wickedness of Tammany Hall.

The Washington Post's and the Literary Digest's polls seem to have got some of the politicians shaking in their shoes.

President Coolidge climbs on the Hoover bandwagon.

Al Smith couldn't have received a more cordial welcome from the ticker-tape reception committee in Broadway if he had flown over.

George Washington was only first in war, first in peace, and first in the hearts of his countrymen, but if Mr. Hoover wins he will be a whole lot of firsts—the first Californian ever elected President, the first man from West of the Mississippi ever elected President, the first man ever elected President the first time he ever ran for any kind of public office, the first man not a soldier ever elected President without previous service in any national, State or local legislative body or any service as Governor of a State, the first millionaire ever elected President, the first Secretary of Commerce to be elected President and the first Herbert ever elected President.

Prof. Michelson believes in the presence of ether although he can't prove it, which is a good deal like McNary and Haugen and their equalization fee.

It'll be plenty of time for Uncle Sam to begin worrying about the limitation of airplane fleets after he's got one.

Al Smith was just about to lose the vote of a big Maryland supporter yesterday when an anonymous friend comes across with $10 to pay the fine. This looks like quick work on Johnny Raskob's part.

Senator Borah, notwithstanding all he has said in the past to the contrary, explains to Boston that Hoover knows beans. He evidently agrees with the anonymous poet who has so truly said, "Wisest is he who, never quite secure, Changes his thoughts for better day by day; Tomorrow some new light will show, be sure, And thou shalt see thy thoughts another way."

After the whispering campaign comes something even quieter—the silent vote.

The campaign draws to a close with Mr. Hoover making a final appeal to the West and Gov. Smith staking his chances on the East, the former apparently having the edge, but with so much uncertainty in the States where there has been a huge registration as to leave the outcome in doubt. As Pope says, "Who shall decide when doctors disagree, And soundest cautions doubt, like you and me."

Gov. Byrd administers a stinging rebuke to Bishop Cannon. It looks as though this campaign had brought about a final separation of state and church down in the wet-drinking, dry-voting South.

If Robinson knows any tricks he should try them now right down in Dixie.

Two New York men contribute $5,000 to both campaign funds, which recalls another striking and appropriate line of Pope— "And nobly wishing party-rage to cease, To buy both sides, and give thy country peace."

The campaign of 1928 has cost to date $9,000,000 and the total may reach $12,000,000. To elect George Washington didn't cost five cents.

Chairman Raskob releases for publication a campaign document raising the religious issue against Gov. Smith which he charges Senator Moses with having sent out from Republican headquarters in New York, as the Rev. Billy Sunday, in a Washington pulp—the church of the President of the United States—compares the Democratic candidate to a "red devil with horns, a forked tail and cloven hoofs." If the American people recover from the consequences of this campaign in a hundred years they'll be lucky.

Josephus Daniels reports that Dixie is watching her step and will not stub her toe next Tuesday, although it was Josephus who put the rock in the path last spring.

SPEAKS IN BROOKLYN AFTER TOUR OF CITY

Rain Fails to Dampen Ardor of Crowd That Cheers Him on Metropolitan Trip.

By EDWIN W. GABLEMAN

(Staff Correspondent of The Post.)

New York, Nov. 2 (A.P.).—Gov. Alfred E. Smith came back home today from his tour of the Nation to receive the unrestrained plaudits of a million or more of his fellow townsmen in two riotous demonstrations—the first from the sidewalks of New York, between which he rode in regal splendor from the Battery to Columbus circle this afternoon, and the second in the Academy of Music in Brooklyn tonight, where he made one of the last of his campaign speeches for the Presidency.

Rain fell upon him and his admirers just as it did on the night in Albany last August when he was notified formally of his nomination for the Presidency, but it detracted nothing from the size or the enthusiasm of the crowds that screamed their love and admiration for him as he passed before them in review.

Tonight in Brooklyn he warmed himself through another admiring throng into the big auditorium that was packed to suffocation with Smith adherents who have followed him devotedly in every municipal and State-wide political battle in which he has engaged.

Talks on State Issues.

The first gun in the last salvo he will fire in his home city in this campaign was loaded with State issues, an accounting, as it were, to the people of New York for his eight years of stewardship in the gubernatorial chair at Albany.

Though intended for national consumption, his speech tonight was an appeal to New York to send him to the White House on the strength of his record as governor of New York. He reviewed in detail his record of administrative and legislative accomplishment at Albany, the major portion of which, he pointed out, was achieved despite a hostile Republican legislature, and offered it as an earnest of what may be expected of him if he is entrusted with the administration of National Affairs.

He shared honors tonight with Franklin D. Roosevelt, his personal choice to succeed him in Albany who received the unanimous endorsement of the Democratic State convention in Rochester last month, and together they made the auditorium ring with the record of Democratic achievement in the State and the promise of a continuation of the same in both Washington and Albany if they are successful at the polls next Tuesday.

Crowd Acclaims Governor.

Gov. Smith was received in the old Democratic stronghold of Brooklyn with riotous acclaim, and from all sides came the assurance to him that the County of Kings will roll up an unprecedented majority for his presidential candidacy.

For years, the governor has been coming to Brooklyn on the Friday night

Lawmaker Sentenced To 5 Years for Graft

New Trial Is Refused for Patterson and 5 Police in Philadelphia.

Philadelphia, Nov. 2 (A.P.).—Matthew Patterson, member of the legislature and Republican ward leader, today was sentenced to five years in the county prison and fined $5,000 on charges of taking bribe money from saloon keepers.

Others sentenced on similar charges as a result of the grand jury investigation of bootlegging and police corruption, were:

Charles W. Schoenleber, former captain and commander of a police district, four years and $10,000 fine.

William O. Kneoll, former captain and commander of a police district, three years and $10,000 fine.

Herbert Layre, special policeman, three years and $3,000 fine.

John W. Sells, special policeman, eighteen months and $2,500 fine.

Albert Long, special policeman, six months and $750 fine.

Before sentencing Patterson and Schoenleber, Judge James G. Gordon, Jr., denied them a new trial.

Lining up the defendants before him, Judge Gordon said:

"All of these cases involved a betrayal of public trust. Your offenses were not the result of sudden temptation or rash reaction to passion. Your criminal action was deliberate and organized into a system, was a cooperative partnership with lawbreakers, and was continued from day to day and from month to month while public security was abandoned to its enemies, with whom you divided the financial fruit of the unholy criminal league."

Counsel for Ward Leader Patterson announced he would take an appeal to the State Superior Court. He asked Judge Gordon to fix bail, pending this appeal. The judge refused to do so and Patterson was taken to the sheriff's cell room with the other defendants.

Coolidge further declared that Hoover's election "seems assured."

Silent Since Convention.

The silence which has heretofore enveloped the White House during the campaign has been one of the mysteries of modern politics. The President has not spoken politically since the Kansas City convention placed Hoover in nomination as his successor. This despite the fact that he has delivered two or three speeches which might have furnished him an opportunity to state his views as the leader of a party involved in what was recognized as a difficult campaign.

Particularly has the President's silence been a blow to his party in his own State of Massachusetts, where the situation even now is difficult, with the Democrats credited with at least an even chance of carrying the State. Politicians are understood to have appealed frequently to the President for some message which would help them in this State, but none has been forthcoming.

All this silence prevailed despite the seeming cordiality which existed between Coolidge and Hoover when the latter was Secretary of Commerce. At that position he seemingly enjoyed the complete friendship and trust of his chief.

CALLS CANDIDATE TRUSTWORTHY, SAFE

Declares Discussion Made Clear Wisdom of Views of G. O. P. Leader.

The long awaited White House statement on the Presidential campaign was made public last night in the form of a telegram from President Coolidge to Herbert Hoover, in which the Chief Executive declared "you have shown your fitness to be President."

Throughout the campaign the President has been sought to make some statement or speech on behalf of the Republican candidate, and rumors that he would or would not follow one another in rapid succession. When Hoover left Washington Thursday and no statement had been forthcoming, it was generally accepted that the President would not break his silence.

Upon his departure from the White House Thursday President Coolidge simply wished his former Secretary of Commerce "good luck," but in his telegram last night he told him "you are able, experienced, trustworthy and safe."

Coolidge further declared that Hoover's election "seems assured."

HOOVER, AT ST. LOUIS, PLEDGES FULL POWER TO FARM RELIEF BODY

Church Charge Stirs Raskob-Moses Clash

Democrat Makes Public Catholic Attack He Lays to G. O. P.

New York, Nov. 2 (A.P.).—John J. Raskob, Democratic national chairman, today gave out copies of what he said was the pamphlet sent by Senator George H. Moses, Republican Eastern advisory chairman, to Zeb Vance Walser, of Lexington, N. C., with the request that Walser obtain its publication in North Carolina newspapers.

The document released by Raskob comprised substantially a summary of the arguments used against Gov. Smith on religious grounds in the campaign. To this document, Raskob said, Senator Moses, in an accompanying letter to Walser, referred as "red-hot stuff."

When the copies were distributed at a press conference, Democratic leaders were asked what proof they had that this was in fact the document sent by Senator Moses to Walser. The reply was that, should authenticity of the document be challenged by Republican leaders, "we may have something more to say."

In releasing the document, Raskob said:

"When this campaign started every one throughout the South and West knew that an appeal was being made to incite religious hatred with a view to defeating Alfred E. Smith for president."

Senator Says He Never Saw Words Before as Used in Text.

New York, Nov. 2 (A.P.).—Senator George H. Moses, Republican Eastern advisory chairman, tonight, when shown a copy of what was said to have been the pamphlet he was charged with having sent to Zeb Vance Walser, of Lexington, N. C., said:

"So far as I can recall, and I think I have a good memory, I never saw this form of words before."

Asserting that he had "never yet descended to a discussion" of the questions involved in the document, he declared that he would decline "now to be involved in it."

Senator Moses was at the home of Daniel E. Pomeroy, vice chairman of the Republican national committee, in Englewood, N. J., when he was shown a copy of the pamphlet, which was made public today by John J. Raskob, Democratic national chairman. The senator had dinner at the Pomeroy home before proceeding to Newark, where he made an address.

"So far as I can recall, and I think I have a good memory," he said, "I never saw this form of words before, however, when people will descend to rifling United States mail and violating a Federal law, during a political campaign, I am not going to be involved in it."

CHEERS HALT SPEECH AS TARIFF IS UPHELD

Standard-Bearer, Earlier, at Louisville, Calls G. O. P. Prosperity Basis.

St. Louis, Mo., Nov. 2 (A.P.).—Herbert Hoover, halted tonight on the edge of the great grain belt to lay before the people of the country a plan to set up a new institution of government to aid the farmer.

Expanding the proposal for a Federal Farm Board, which he made early in the campaign, the Republican presidential candidate said in an address at the Coliseum that this board would be clothed with full power to cope with each and every one of the multitude of problems that affect agriculture.

The program of his party, he said, provides that the board would have full power to act and be authorized to aid in developing cooperative marketing; clearing houses for agricultural products; adequate warehousing facilities; the elimination of wastes in distribution. "But in particular," he added, "the board is to build up with initial advances of capital from the Government, farmer-owned and farmer-controlled stabilization corporations which will protect the farmer from depressions and the demoralization of summer and periodic surpluses."

"It is proposed that this board should have placed at its disposal such resources as are necessary to make its action effective."

Extra Session If Needed.

Hoover expressed hope that the December session of Congress would be able to reach a solution, but promised that "if this is not possible, I would call a special session in order that we might speedily arrive at a determination of the question before the next harvest."

A last minute change in time for opening of his speech, forced a general speeding up of his schedule upon his arrival in St. Louis and his automobiles raced through the streets at breakneck speed.

A crowd that had massed about the front of the Coliseum started a pell-mell rush for the entrance after his automobiles arrived and many members of his party were forced to fight their way through the jam, with police blocking all comers. Allan Hoover was caught in the throng and for several minutes was pushed about by the crowd, while he attempted to convince a burly policeman that he was a member of the party.

The entrance of the candidate to the Coliseum was the signal for the beginning of a demonstration. The crowd roared and cheered for more than ten minutes.

Finally a band playing "The Star-Spangled Banner" brought the voices into the harmony, and at its conclusion Henry S. Caulfield, Republican candidate for Governor of Missouri, attempted to still the tumult while he introduced the nominee.

Noise Drowns Voice.

The noise continued and he made his introductory remarks any way, with persons 10 feet away scarcely able to distinguish his words from the general noise. As Hoover approached the microphone the cheers redoubled in force and it was a moment or so before he was able to begin his speech. Once underway, however, Hoover received close attention.

As he began to draw a distinction between the entrance of the Govern-

Campaign Cost $9,000,000 To Date, Breaking Record

Figures May Ascend to $12,000,000; G. O. P. Chest, $5,000,000.

(United Press.)

The largest expenditures ever recorded in a Presidential campaign were listed last night with the clerk of the House of Representatives in reports from the Republican and Democratic National committees showing a total of nearly $9,000,000 has been spent in the Hoover-Smith campaign.

This greatly exceeds estimates of campaign managers before the campaign was well under way and indications are that the figure may climb to within $12,000,000 when final reports of State and local committees, the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment, the Antisocial League, and other independent organizations participating in the campaign are made.

State and local committees and State committees of independent campaign organizations do not report here, but to State officials, and the total expended in this Presidential campaign—already by far the largest in

The Republican National committee campaign chest had reached almost $5,000,000 on November 1. Contributions totaled $4,911,744, of which $137,383 remains, J. R. Nutt, Republican national committee treasurer, reported.

The Democratic committee reported total contributions of approximately $3,000,000, and an additional $1,000,000 was borrowed to finance the campaign. A balance of this fund of $2,004 was reported.

FURNACE GIRL LAYS BURNING TO OTHERS

Dying, She Tells Hitchcock She Did Not Cause Own Injuries.

HUNT FOR GUILTY STARTS

Lake Bluff, Ill., Nov. 2 (A.P.).—The words, "I didn't do it—they did it," murmured shortly before she died today, made of Alfrida Knaak, the 30-year-old woman who confessed immolation by burning in a police station furnace, a greater mystery in death than she had been for three days while she fought for life in a Lake Forest hospital.

Whether she was conscious of what she said and whether the words were intended to contradict the fantastic story to which the attractive book agent and Sunday school teacher clung tenaciously for three days, those at her bedside had no way of knowing.

For words, however, sent Lake County authorities on a new search for other who might be involved in her death after they had virtually accepted her story, repeated many times since she was found Tuesday morning in the basement of the Lake Bluff village hall, nude and with arms and legs burned to the bone.

In her statement to which she adhered for three days, even when told that she would die, Miss Knaak, a former student of psychology, said she spent Monday night in the deserted village hall and at dawn Tuesday decided to burn herself in the basement furnace to prove her love and attain spiritual purity.

She said she removed and burned her clothing and then thrust legs and arms into the live coals.

The story at first was scoffed at by the authorities. Then, as it was told over and over, they came to believe it for want of any other explanation. Shortly before dawn today, however, from the swollen, cracked lips of the

COLLISION AT PENSACOLA

Pensacola, Fla., Nov. 2 (A.P.).—Enoch Broyles McIntosh, chief aviation pilot of the United States Navy, flight instructor at Cory Field here, was killed today when his plane crashed into another 200 feet above the field.

Flying H. Howell, of Macomb, Ill., student flier in McIntosh's plane, suffered a broken arm, but he was not seriously injured. The other plane was piloted by Second Lieut. Peter P. Schrider, U. S. Marine Corps, a student flier of Washington, D. C., who landed his machine in safety although its propeller was bent in the collision.

McIntosh lost control of his plane when the two machines crashed, and it plunged to the field. He died en route to a hospital. He had been in the Navy nearly eleven years. He was 32 years old and was born at Luraville, Va. His widow, living here, survives.

Horse Lost in Mystery

Fire at Ayrshire Stable

Special to The Washington Post.

Upperville, Va., Nov. 2.—A fire of unreported origin tonight destroyed the stables housing 12 thoroughbred mares on the Ayrshire Farm, near here. Eleven of the horses were lost to safety, but one was burned to death with a pony when it stampeded and refused to be led from the blazing stables. The loss was estimated at $30,000.

Mrs. Walter Jones, daughter of Gen. James A. Buchanan, of Civil War Fame, is the owner of the Ayrshire Farm, of more than 800 acres. Tonight marked the second time within a month that fire has destroyed the stables. The farm is located about four miles from the stock farms of Rear Admiral Cary Grayson and Samuel Ross, race horse owners.

BORAH SPEECH CAPS HUGE BOSTON RALLY

Senator Calls Hoover "Fit," Says Achievements Bring Voters' Approval.

TORCHLIGHT PARADE HELD

Boston, Mass., Nov. 2 (A.P.).—The confidence of the voter in the capacity and fitness of Herbert Hoover for the Presidency was the keynote sounded tonight by Senator William E. Borah, in a speech which culminated a huge demonstration by Massachusetts Republicans for the Hoover-Curtis ticket.

This confidence of the electorate was characterized by the senator as "the dominating, winning factor, pointing toward Hoover's victory." His address was the climax of the Bay State Capital's rally, which included a two-hour torchlight parade and the listening by a large audience, filling the Boston Arena, to the radio reproduction of the Republican standard bearer's speech in St. Louis.

"That is an element in the campaign which pervades the entire country," the senator said of Hoover's fitness, "and breaks across party lines. The pulse and judgment, the wide experience, achievements in the field of economics and his services to humanity, and above all, his phenomenal record for completing any task which may be assigned to him, complex and difficult as it may be, have radiated respect and confidence among the voters."

"In the South, they do not speak of parties, but of Hoover; Hoover, the executive, the man among men. The business man, the laborer and the farmer, the man of the people, the man of the hour."

All Saloons in World to Go If Hoover Wins, Says Sunday

Evangelist, at First Congregational Church, Predicts G. O. P. Victory Will Dry Every Nation in 10 Years. Attacks Smith's and Raskob's Liquor Stand.

Al Smith was compared to the devil with horns, a forked tail and cloven hoofs by the Rev. William A. Sunday, evangelist, last night in an address before an audience which overflowed the First Congregational Church at Tenth and G streets northwest.

Mr. Sunday explained his two-hour diatribe against the Democratic nominee for President and John J. Raskob, his campaign manager, by pointing to their opposition to the eighteenth amendment.

"The greatest calamity that could befall America both morally and economically," the evangelist declared, "would be the repeal of the eighteenth amendment."

The arguments against prohibition, he said, to use another Sunday simile, "are as weak as soup made out of the shadow of a chicken that starved to death."

The evangelist said the eyes of the civilized world are upon America and then predicted that if America holds

RIGHT FOODS EATEN BY FEW, HE FINDS

Dr. Walker Tells Dietitians in Baltimore of Ills Due to Family Menus.

NEEDFUL THINGS OMITTED

Baltimore, Md., Nov. 2 (A.P.)—Disclosing facts which he believes may account for much that is wrong with the world, Dr. George Walker, Baltimore physician and research worker, today laid before the American Dietetic Association the initial results of a study of the eating habits of 750 families, ranging from the very poor to the very rich.

His investigation, growing out of an interest in the welfare of orphans and other inmates of public institutions in Maryland and elsewhere, he said, has brought to light a number of significant deficiencies in the every day diets of persons in general.

Practically all of those he has studied, he said, whether their average only 6 cents a day for each individual, or $1.95, consume too little of the essential minerals, too much of the vegetable and too little of the animal proteins, less than half their requirements in the way of nondigestible, fibrous or cellulose material, and probably only 20 per cent as much as they need of raw foods containing the very important but little understood vitamin C.

Blamed for Mouth Troubles.

The absence of that vitamin, which is virtually destroyed by cooking in all vegetables except tomatoes and potatoes and is reduced in them, is known to cause scurvy. While this disease of the capillary blood vessels, smaller arteries and veins, is rare in its recognized form, Dr. Walker said he believed many of the disorders which appear in the gums, the teeth, the upper part of the intestinal tract and the bones could be traced to the widespread deficiency of the same dietary element.

Among children in public institutions, he told the dietitians, he found that, while they get enough not to be hungry, none had been able to ingest the necessary variety of food necessary for normal growth and future health. They could be fed properly, he estimated, on 33.26 cents a day at wholesale prices.

For the average growing child, living at home, he calculated, a minimum expenditure of $7.31 cents a day, at retail prices, is necessary, and for their parents and grown-up brothers and sisters, 44.93 cents. The difference is largely accounted for by the fact that the child needs at least a quart of milk, rich in animal proteins, calcium and phosphorus, every day, while a pint will do for the adults.

Family Foods Deficient.
Of 300 family food accounts, representing a daily individual expenditure around 45 cents, all showed deficiencies of one kind or another, he said, which could easily be corrected without adding to the cost.

The general deficiency in fiber consumption, contributing to a number of human ailments, he thought, was a result of the tendency to pass up the coarse foods, raw and cooked, in favor of highly refined products from which most of the roughage has been removed. The lack of the blood building element of iron in 40 per cent of the food accounts analyzed, appeared associated with economic considerations, as almost any generous diet will contain a sufficiency of this mineral.

Shortages of the other two most necessary minerals, calcium, or lime, and phosphorus, were even more pronounced. In 75 per cent of all the diets, accounting among other things, he said, for the prevalence of rickets, the proportion of calcium in the vegetables and milk was below normal, while 62 per cent were deficient in phosphorus, essential to the growth and health of the nerves and bones, also chiefly obtainable from milk.

OBERGON'S MURDER KEYS GIVEN BRIBE DONE AS SACRIFICE IN SHOP, IS CHARGED

Meant to End Bloodshed by California Police Seek Trio
Killing General and Himself, Says Slayer.

HOPED TO SAVE OTHERS ALSO FACES CIVIL TRIAL
San Angel, Mexico, Nov. 2 (A.P.)—Jose de Leon-Toral, on trial for the assassination of President-elect Obregon, today told the judge and jury that he had decided to kill the president-elect as the only thing to do to help the cause, "referring to the religious controversy in Mexico."

Toral said this in the course of a series of "declarations" lasting an hour and a quarter after a jury had been selected and his trial, which is being broadcast by radio, was opened. Mother Concepcion, charged with being Toral's accomplice, went on trial with him.

The slayer of the president-elect said that his idea was to sacrifice his own life as well as that of Obregon so that there would be no other bloodshed on the religious issues. Toral answered: "I acted for the good of all Catholics." "It was a mission of God," he continued. "I did not know exactly what immediate results the assassination would bring, but I was confident it would bring relief to Catholics."

Toral took the stand for interrogation by the judge, and spoke in a firm voice. He said that Gen. Obregon was one of those responsible for the religious question and for its consequent loss of many lives.

"Those who live by the sword, die by the sword," he remarked. He said he believed there existed in Mexico persecution of the Catholic Church. He believed that if the general indifference continued, the cause of religion would be lost in Mexico, and therefore he had concluded to kill Obregon.

So intense is the interest of the trial that about 200 persons slept in the streets and plaza in front of the municipal building last night in order to be on hand for the opening of the court this morning.

A strong police guard was thrown about the building to prevent disorder. The proceedings will be broadcast by radio.

ELECTION COLLEGE WITNESS COLLAPSES

Girl Unable to Testify After

STATE RESTS ITS CASE

Chicago, Nov. 2 (A.P.)—The court room of Judge John M. O'Connor was thrown into a flurry of excitement late today when a defense witness in the trial of 16 alleged henchmen of Morris E. Ellery, city collector, for election conspiracy, was arrested on a perjury charge.

The witness, Anthony Sparks, was stopped by a policeman as he stepped to the door of the courtroom. The defense attorneys moved to object, but the judge ruled that the witness must testify. Sparks, accused as the kidnaper of a political foe, had actually been friendly with him.

"The man perjured himself on the stand," replied Edwin J. Raber, assistant prosecutor, when the arrest was made known. "He said he voted right after Pete Pacelli, accused as the kidnaper of a political foe, had actually been friendly with him."

Operation Saves Thief From Jail

Crime Tendency Missing,
Says Doctor After Thyroid Gland Adjustment.

Baltimore, Nov. 2 (N.Y.W.S.)—An operation on the thyroid gland freed Stanley Trot from criminal tendencies and saved him from a jail term. Trot was convicted a week ago of committing many petty thefts, but the court yielded to the plea of Dr. George C. Blades, who expressed the opinion that Trot was not a natural criminal and could be cured.

The court paroled Trot in Dr. Blades' custody with the understanding that the operation be performed. The operation was performed by Dr. C. L. Seamer, resident surgeon at the Church Home and Infirmary. Within 72 hours Trot is said to have begun to show improvement.

Today, Dr. Blades reported that Trot's mind is very clear and he has no promptings whatever to do wrong. Trot should have outdoor employment so that he may have the benefit of the air which was not a natural criminal and could be cured.

FREEING OF SUSPECT BLOCKED BY WOMEN

Two Say Man Held in Olga
Bayes' Death Was Nervous on Fatal Night.

BLOODSTAIN CLEW FAILS

Stamford, Conn., Nov. 2 (A.P.)—For a few minutes today Paul G. Lambert, a suspect in the fatal assault on Olga Bayes, stenographer of Ansonia, was nearer his freedom than he has been at any time since Thursday when he was detained by the police. It was practically decided to release him after a chemist's report had shown that stains found on the door of Lambert's garage and on his car were made by some sort of grease and not by blood as had been suspected.

Then two other witnesses came forward with information which again threw suspicion on the aluminum was salesman and Columbia graduate.

The new witnesses are Mrs. Anna Pollack and Miss Mary Tarent, employees of the Davenport Coffee Shop, where Lambert had often lunched. Both women told police today that on Thursday night, October 25, Lambert came in about a quarter after eight, called for a cup of coffee, drank half of it and hurried out without paying. Both said he appeared nervous.

Their statements contradict in part the story told by Lambert of his movements on the night on which the girl was attacked and thrown into a brook, and also tend to disprove the statements of Mr. and Mrs. Edward F. Lockwood and their daughter, Winifred, who said Lambert was demonstrating aluminum ware at their home from late in the afternoon until after 10 o'clock.

However, Lambert has already been arrested and is being held in the police station on his way home from the Lockwood home and he admits that the two women are mistaken in their placing of the time.

Lambert completed a course in journalism at Columbia University in 1919. While attending college he married Miss Mary Washburn. They separated last year and Mrs. Lambert took their three children to New York while Lambert obtained his present position and also took a post as caretaker of the Col. L. D. Van Aken place at Shilpan.

IN THE MIDDLE OF THE ROAD

Text of the speech delivered by Herbert Hoover in St. Louis last night follows:

I propose tonight to discuss the constructive side of government. I propose to outline something of the principles which must underlie the action of government, to the constructive side which confront us. A few nights ago in New York I had occasion to discuss these principles in application to matters which the Government should not undertake. Tonight I discuss them in connection with matters which the Government should and must undertake. Its purpose is not merely to stand as a watchman over what is feasible, European manner must be a constructive force.

Our country has a political, social and economic system that is peculiarly our own. It is the American system. It grew out of our revolt from European system and has ripened with our experience and our ideals. We have seen the world tried to express it or define it. It has been the moving force of our progress. It has brought us into the leadership of the world.

The founder of our Republic under Divine inspiration set up not alone a great political system of self-government, but a social system also. It was a social system in the relation of men toward men.

Our political system is unique in the world. It is unique because of its decentralization of self-government and its checks and balances which safeguard ordered liberty and freedom to the individual. Our social system is unique in the world. It is unique because it is founded not only upon the ideal that all men are created equal and are equal before the law, but upon the ideal that there shall be equal opportunity among men. We have no frozen classes or stratification of caste in our country. Our social system prevents the rise of every boy and girl to the position to which their initiative and talents will carry them. We have no titles except the description of our jobs.

Economic System Evolving.

From our unique political and social ideals we are evolving a unique economic system. We have discarded the original European system of a struggle between the few and the many. Under that theory it was held that labor was a commodity, that it was to be bought and sold like any other commodity. In general could never rise far above bare existence, for if he did so the supply of labor would increase and the competition pull him back into the cesspool of inevitable poverty.

We Americans have proved this conception wrong. By what we call the American system, we have developed a new economic system. The dominating idea of that system is that labor is not a commodity, but that it is a part of the human body. It is a part of the human body which in America means the savings of the people, on the other hand, by joint effort can steadily increase the efficiency of the human body. It is a part of the human body which by joint effort we can steadily increase the production of goods by each individual and we can thereby increase the cost of goods. As we increase the volume of goods, we have more to do with the human body. It is a part of the human body which by joint effort we can steadily increase the production of goods by each individual and we can thereby increase the cost of goods. As we increase the volume of goods, we have more to do with the human body.

These three revolutionary American ideas, political, social and economic, are interlocked and intermeshed. They are dominated and cemented by the ideal and principle of equal opportunity. They are dominated and cemented by the ideal and principle of equal opportunity. They are dominated and cemented by the ideal and principle of equal opportunity.

By adhering to these principles we have raised humanity to greater heights of well-being than ever before in history. They are the very essence of progressive government and of self-government. We must apply them to the constructive side of government. There are three essential principles in which the principles and impulses of our American system require that government take constructive action. They are: first, the principle of local community can itself assume and which the individual initiative and enterprise of the people can not wholly compass. They are: first, the principle of local community can itself assume and which the individual initiative and enterprise of the people can not wholly compass.

Make Effective by Republicans.

The Second of These Is the Necessary

The second of these is the necessary interest and activity of the Federal Government in fostering education, public health, scientific research, public parks, conservation of national resources, agriculture, industry and foreign commerce.

The Third of These Is the Necessary

The third of these is the necessary assistance of the Government to the growing efforts of our people to cooperation among themselves in the use of social and economic ends.

The First of the Particular Tasks

The first of the particular tasks to which I believe this constructive side of Government should be directed is public works.

Inland Waterways.

More than any other section of our country the Midwest is at this time vitally concerned with the advancement of these undertakings. I have stated on other occasions that, due to the shift of economic currents from the war, the Midwest has had an equal opportunity with the rest of our country. The natural increase in freight rates due to the war, the building of the St. Lawrence river, and the fact that the cost of ocean transportation has remained practically stationary, have contributed to thrust the Midwest into an economic setting greatly to her disadvantage.

Almost exactly three years ago

Almost exactly three years ago at Kansas City I said that the shifting of economic currents demanded a new vision of interior waterway development. I then urged that it was time to reject the old view of inland waterways as a series of isolated projects, and that instead we should consolidate our interior waterways into a great integrated system which I called the Mississippi system.

We have an opportunity to create

We have an opportunity to create three great trunk lines of water transportation—one north and south, 1,800 miles from New Orleans through St. Louis to Chicago, and thus by the Lakes to the northern boundary of our country. Another east and west, 1,800 miles from Pittsburgh through St. Louis to Kansas City, and the third shipway through the St. Lawrence connecting Duluth and all the Lake ports with the sea. Vital to this system is the improvement of the latter, which the St. Lawrence waterway, connecting Minneapolis and St. Paul, the upper Missouri connecting Sioux City and beyond, as well as the Cumberland, the Tennessee, the Arkansas, and the Red River and lesser streams. When completed, including the St. Lawrence waterway, this entire system will comprise 12,000 miles of most essential transportation connecting twenty States with the Gulf on one end and with the North Atlantic on the other.

Authorized by Congress.

Under the direction of Midwest senators and congressmen and supported by great civic associations of the Midwest and with the help given by the Departments of War and Commerce, this conception of our waterway system has now been finally accepted by the country as a great program of national development. Congress has authorized the completion of the system—except the St. Lawrence concerning which the St. Lawrence Waterway Commission is still pending.

We have already expended nearly $100,000,000 upon the new program of inland waterways. This comprehensive system will not reach full usefulness until it is complete and inter-connected. And it is today a social system in the relation of men toward men.

Our political system is unique in the world. It is unique because of its decentralization of self-government and its checks and balances which safeguard ordered liberty and freedom to the individual. Our social system is unique in the world. It is unique because it is founded not only upon the ideal that all men are created equal and are equal before the law, but upon the ideal that there shall be equal opportunity among men. We have no frozen classes or stratification of caste in our country. Our social system prevents the rise of every boy and girl to the position to which their initiative and talents will carry them. We have no titles except the description of our jobs.

It is a part of the human body which by joint effort we can steadily increase the production of goods by each individual and we can thereby increase the cost of goods. As we increase the volume of goods, we have more to do with the human body.

These three revolutionary American ideas, political, social and economic, are interlocked and intermeshed. They are dominated and cemented by the ideal and principle of equal opportunity. They are dominated and cemented by the ideal and principle of equal opportunity. They are dominated and cemented by the ideal and principle of equal opportunity.

By Adhering to These Principles

By adhering to these principles we have raised humanity to greater heights of well-being than ever before in history. They are the very essence of progressive government and of self-government. We must apply them to the constructive side of government. There are three essential principles in which the principles and impulses of our American system require that government take constructive action. They are: first, the principle of local community can itself assume and which the individual initiative and enterprise of the people can not wholly compass. They are: first, the principle of local community can itself assume and which the individual initiative and enterprise of the people can not wholly compass.

The Second of These Is the Necessary

The second of these is the necessary interest and activity of the Federal Government in fostering education, public health, scientific research, public parks, conservation of national resources, agriculture, industry and foreign commerce.

The Third of These Is the Necessary

The third of these is the necessary assistance of the Government to the growing efforts of our people to cooperation among themselves in the use of social and economic ends.

The First of the Particular Tasks

The first of the particular tasks to which I believe this constructive side of Government should be directed is public works.

Inland Waterways.

More than any other section of our country the Midwest is at this time vitally concerned with the advancement of these undertakings. I have stated on other occasions that, due to the shift of economic currents from the war, the Midwest has had an equal opportunity with the rest of our country. The natural increase in freight rates due to the war, the building of the St. Lawrence river, and the fact that the cost of ocean transportation has remained practically stationary, have contributed to thrust the Midwest into an economic setting greatly to her disadvantage.

Almost exactly three years ago

Almost exactly three years ago at Kansas City I said that the shifting of economic currents demanded a new vision of interior waterway development. I then urged that it was time to reject the old view of inland waterways as a series of isolated projects, and that instead we should consolidate our interior waterways into a great integrated system which I called the Mississippi system.

We have an opportunity to create

We have an opportunity to create three great trunk lines of water transportation—one north and south, 1,800 miles from New Orleans through St. Louis to Chicago, and thus by the Lakes to the northern boundary of our country. Another east and west, 1,800 miles from Pittsburgh through St. Louis to Kansas City, and the third shipway through the St. Lawrence connecting Duluth and all the Lake

High Points in Hoover Address On Aid for Farms at St. Louis

There has never been a national campaign into which so large a discussion of the agricultural problem has entered as in this campaign. That is as it should be. It is the most urgent economic problem in our Nation today.

Many factors enter into the solution of the whole problem. One is by tariff to reserve to the farmer the American market. * * * another part of solution is to provide cheaper transportation to market.

If you want the protective principle preserved, and if you want it strengthened on farm products, it should be entrusted to the party that has fought for and has defended it for 70 years.

In addition to the tariff and cheaper waterway transportation in assistance to agriculture, the Republican party proposes to go farther.

We propose to create a Federal farm board composed of men of understanding and sympathy for the problems of agriculture * * * with power to determine the facts and causes, the remedies which should be applied.

In particular the board is to build up with initial advances of capital from the Government, farmer-owned and farmer-controlled stabilization corporations which will protect the farmer from depressions and the demoralization of summer and periodic surpluses.

No such far-reaching and specific proposal has ever been made by a political party on behalf of any industry in our history. It is a direct business proposition. It marks our desire for establishment of farmers' stability and at the same time maintains his independence and individuality.

I am hopeful that in the December session of Congress it will be possible to reach that solution. However, as I have already said, if this is not possible I would call a special session in order that we might speedily arrive at a determination of the question before the next harvest.

I look forward to the day when our farm organizations will be as cooperatively and as advantageously linked to governmental encouragement and service as many of our industrial organizations are now.

It is from this cooperation of government with the great agencies of public welfare that we may inspire and build up the contributions to stronger family life, better homes, more recreation, and for the general well being.

There have been many reasons for the difficulty of finding a complete solution. Let me offer two or three suggestions. The first is there has been a tendency to look for solution of the whole agricultural problem with a single formula. The result has been that the leaders of these branches of agriculture to which that formula would not apply or to which it did not apply have immediately fallen into opposition. Therefore on any special plan of relief we have always had sharp disagreement within the industry itself.

Another part of the solution must be to secure the stability of price which are now unduly affected both by the seasonal surplus and by the periodic surplus over one year or another. Another part of the solution is to maintain stability and high purchasing power for our consumers. Any depression of the price of farm products is reflected to the farmer. Finally, every different agricultural product is affected by different forces, and the tariff is a plan of action which will give aid to each as is required.

Protective Tariff Essential.

Adequate tariff is essential if we would assure relief to the farm. The first and most complete necessity is to reserve to the farmer the American market. That can be assured to him solely through the protective tariff. The tariff is effective today on many farm products, including wool, sugar, fruit, cattle, dairy products, vegetable oils and a score of other products. It maintains the price of these products at a level which is not only high enough to enable the farmer to produce them profitably, but it also enables him to produce them in a more efficient manner.

The duties are not high enough on some products, but, nevertheless, they are effective over a considerable portion of our whole agricultural production. And it can be made more effective, for we are still importing a considerable quantity of foreign products which could be produced on our soil. One difficulty in our present corn market is the imports of corn from the seaboard. The tariff will erect a barrier to the import of corn and thereby decrease the surplus problem. The tariff will also erect a barrier to the import of other products which have been displaced what would otherwise have been larger and even more unmanageable surpluses of other products.

Beyond this the tariff in protecting the wage level of the American worker increases his buying power for the products of the farm. We have factories in the Midwest which produce protection from lower wages of foreign countries, as well as the products of the farm. The standards of living among our workers, our city populations, is the only standard in the world which purchases them in the market. The tariff will protect them from the competition of foreign labor. The tariff will also protect them from the competition of foreign labor.

Another part of the solution must be to secure the stability of price which are now unduly affected both by the seasonal surplus and by the periodic surplus over one year or another. Another part of the solution is to maintain stability and high purchasing power for our consumers. Any depression of the price of farm products is reflected to the farmer. Finally, every different agricultural product is affected by different forces, and the tariff is a plan of action which will give aid to each as is required.

The New Cooperation.

I have said that there is a third great group of activities in the promotion of the public welfare where the Government, without abandoning the American system, may develop new principles of cooperation with its citizens.

We have in the past quarter of a century evolved a higher sense of organized cooperation than has ever been known before. We have 10,000 examples of this conscious cooperative development in the enormous growth of associations of all sorts and kinds. We have labor unions, trade unions, professional associations, labor unions, trade unions, professional associations, labor unions, trade unions, professional associations.

I am hopeful that in the December session of Congress it will be possible to reach that solution. However, as I have already said, if this is not possible I would call a special session in order that we might speedily arrive at a determination of the question before the next harvest.

Underwood Tariff Secured.

And while I am on the tariff and before we turn to other phases of the farm problem, let me say that the party which has fought for and has defended it for 70 years. with them. Without intrusion the Government should serve to bring together discordant elements and to secure cooperation between different industries and groups. * * * a great hope of a new basis of cooperation between the problems and progressive action of our people. It should be the response of Government to our new economic conditions. It is consonant with the American system. It is a method that reinforces our individualism by reducing, and not increasing Government interference in business and the life of our citizens.

Such cooperation strengthens the whole foundations of self-government and the progress of the country. It is a method that reinforces our individualism by reducing, and not increasing Government interference in business and the life of our citizens.

In Two Directions.

This cooperation can take two distinct directions. It can assist in the promotion of constructive projects of public interest on one hand and it can assist in the cure of abuses by the voluntary establishment of a higher code of ethics and a sterner standard in the conduct of business.

These are not theoretical proposals. Seven and a half years ago I introduced this relationship between the Department of Commerce and industry. We cooperated with these associations in the promotion of foreign trade, in the elimination of waste, in furtherance of economic and scientific research, in improvement of homes, and in scores of other activities. During this period hundreds of committees have been in active cooperation with the Department of Commerce, not under compulsion, but even under solicitation from the department, but merely because the Government was willing and ready to assist in the promotion of the elements of any movement that would promote public welfare. I perhaps may have made more every citizen by giving you some illustrations.

First, I may review a case of assistance to labor and business. In 1923, under my chairmanship, there were organized a series of committees representing the manufacturers, contractors, engineers, estate men and labor. The purpose was to reduce the loss of time due to the seasonal character of these industries. The result was a reorganization set up, the average number of employees in these trades has been reduced from about 100 days to about 100 days. "In the last 40 days I have talked with men and women in every walk of life and with almost every outlook upon life, and that is the measure they give to Mr. Hoover. They believe he is equal to the task; that he is equipped to deal with our great economic and social problems and to lead the nation not only soundly but with justice."

Emphasizing that the Government should be a citizen, the senator appealed to the Bay State electorate to support Hoover on this basis. "Both our material and moral welfare are vitally affected," he declared, "for better or for worse, by the wisdom or unwisdom of our Government, not less by the administration of laws than the laws which we pass."

The demonstration of the Bay State Republicans included a parade of thousands of men and women, through the Back Bay and downtown sections of Boston, reviewed by Gov. Alvin T. Fuller. Mayor Michael J. Curran, and members of the party's congressional and State tickets.

Following upon the reception of Hoover's speech at the State House, the senator, chairman of the State Republican committee, and Robert M. Washburn, president of the Roosevelt Club of Massachusetts, were on the program to give brief talks before Senator Borah commenced his speech, which was broadcast over a Nation-wide radio network.

The senator will leave Boston tomorrow to deliver his final speech of the campaign at Utica, N. Y., tomorrow night.

MR. COOLIDGE SPEAKS.

With unexpected force and finality, President Coolidge has signified his desire that the American people shall elect Herbert Hoover as his successor. The President's telegram to Mr. Hoover will be discussed by every voter in the country today. It is brief, but within it is compacted the sum of the reasons why Mr. Coolidge hails the election of Hoover as assuring a continuance of the prosperity and welfare of the United States. Mr. Hoover's high qualifications were never so well set forth, or with such powerful effect, as they are summed up by the man who, above all others, is the most competent to pass judgment upon them.

Millions of citizens ardently hoped that Mr. Coolidge himself would consent to remain in the White House. They dreaded a change. They have learned to attach greater weight to the few words that come from Calvin Coolidge than to all other political utterances combined. What he says is true. Hence, when he tells the voters that he reposes absolute confidence in Mr. Hoover, and sees in him the one who by character, experience and strength can best discharge the office of President, his assurance sounds with tremendous effect throughout the country, and removes the last vestige of doubt from the minds of wavering voters.

President Coolidge has done a generous service to his countrymen by speaking at this moment. His silence until after election would have been misconstrued notwithstanding the universal knowledge that he wished to see Hoover elected. By giving the weight of his prestige and popularity to the Hoover cause President Coolidge has clarified the situation and given to the people the satisfaction of knowing that when they vote for Hoover they will be placing in the White House a man who in Mr. Coolidge's words has shown his fitness to be President.

"The truth has a power and conclusiveness of its own," says President Coolidge. Herbert Hoover's reliance upon the simple truth, his adherence to sound and true principles, and his candid and courteous demeanor during the campaign, have won the admiration of President Coolidge as it has won the confidence of the public. The people ardently desire that the Presidency shall be in the hands of a man who will hold the Government to the true principles of the Constitution. Having absolute trust in Calvin Coolidge, they know that he would not mislead them in the all-important matter of electing his successor.

When President Coolidge tells the American people that he is sure the Presidency would be safe in the competent hands of Mr. Hoover, and that the welfare of the people would be secure, it is a foregone conclusion that the great majority will accept this assurance as a final and conclusive warrant for voting for Hoover.

THE DIGEST POLL.

The Literary Digest presidential poll has been completed. Of the 19,000,000 ballots distributed 2,767,263 were returned. Mr. Hoover upon the first compilation assumed the lead over Gov. Smith and the relative positions of the two candidates did not change through subsequent compilations. If the poll is to be considered accurately indicative of next Tuesday's vote Mr. Hoover need not fear defeat. Democrats, however, insist that the poll is inaccurate and they have developed several systems for analyzing it, each of which is calculated to prove that Gov. Smith will become the next President.

What has it cost the Digest to carry through the presidential poll? Nineteen million ballots mailed under a 1 cent postage stamp necessitated a postage payment of $190,000. To each return card was affixed an additional 1 cent stamp, representing an aggregate expenditure of $190,000 more. To the total of $380,000 postage expense must be added the cost of printing, labor and tabulation. If it was accomplished at a cost of as little as 2 cents a ballot, surely a conservative figure, the total cost of the poll will have run to not less than $950,000. Each of the 16,232,737 ballots distributed but not returned bore a 1 cent stamp, representing a postage expenditure of $162,327 that literally will be "burned up," for the cards can not be utilized.

Was the poll worth $1,000,000, more or less, that it cost? The result of the election will tell the tale. If it is demonstrated in this unusual and bitterly fought contest that the straw vote provides a reasonably accurate indication of the trend it will be worth millions to the Literary Digest in prestige, advertising and increased circulation.

HOOVER AND SMITH.

Herbert Hoover's capacity in comprehending national problems and the natural bent of his mind toward constructive action are well illustrated in his speech at St. Louis. No President has ever demonstrated a broader comprehension of national problems, or offered more statesmanlike constructive proposals than those set forth in this speech.

It is fortunate for the United States that it has the opportunity to elect a President who thoroughly understands the American system of government. If Mr. Hoover's proposals were merely brilliant flights of imagination, or based upon principles repugnant to the American system of government, they could be set down as campaign floundering, designed to catch votes and nothing else. But his immense conception of inland waterway development, his program for betterment of agriculture, and his proposal for greater cooperation between the Government and industrial groups are all practical, attainable, and constitutional. They are all founded upon the American principle of equality of opportunity.

"By this principle," says Mr. Hoover, "we should test every act of government, every proposal, whether it be economic or political. I insist upon the most strict regulation of public utilities, because otherwise they would destroy equality of opportunity. I object to the Government going into business in competition with its citizens, because that would destroy equality of opportunity."

It is not surprising that Senator Norris should be delighted with Gov. Smith's espousal of the bureaucratic scheme to put the Government into the grain-selling business. It is of the same nature with other schemes to make the Government a trader. Stripping it of all superficial wrappings, it is found to be essentially a denial of the right of every American to equality of opportunity, whether he be a farmer, a laborer, or a builder. The country sees in this campaign a menace to the American system of equality in the bold and reckless proposal of Gov. Smith to put the Government into business in competition with its own citizens. Speaking of the chief problems that must be solved if the country is to be at peace, with equal opportunities held open to all its people, Mr. Hoover said last night: "Solution of these questions is not always easy. Only the inexperience can be positive in offering solutions of great problems. The first necessity in the handling of such problems is the assembling of the facts in their proper perspective. The truth must be forged from the metal of facts."

But Gov. Smith is not bothered by constitutional obstacles in offering his panacea for farm relief and Government business operations. He has not sufficiently studied the Constitution, which confers certain powers upon the Government and denies all other powers to it. Among the powers denied to the Government is that of going into merchandising. The other day The Post quoted Chief Justice Marshall against Gov. Smith. If it be suggested that Chief Justice Marshall has been a long time dead, and that electric power has been evolved since his time, and that this discovery justifies the entry of the Government into business, let us cite another authority; now living, a member of the United States Supreme Court, Justice Sutherland. While president of the American Bar Association Justice Sutherland said:

Whatever may be said as to the power of a particular State or municipality to engage in some specific business activity, I have never been able to understand how the Federal Government, with its precisely enumerated and delegated powers, may constitutionally engage in business. Speaking of the power to regulate interstate and foreign commerce, Justice Sutherland continued:

That power which is conferred is to regulate, not to do, the substantive thing, which is the subject of regulating. To build a highway or even a railroad may be accepted as a regulating of commerce, since its effect is to facilitate commerce, and thus to condition or regulate it, but the building of a road and the carrying of passengers over the road are two very different things. The building of the railroad may regulate commerce, but the carrying of passengers and goods over the road is commerce itself, and under our system always regarded as a private activity as distinct from a Government function.

Herbert Hoover understands this, and accordingly, his plan of farm relief, avoids putting the Government into the business of buying and selling grain surpluses, directly or through a corporation set up by the Government. But Gov. Smith does not seem to understand that the Constitution forbids the Government from going into business. He proposes that the Government shall handle the farm surpluses and collect a tax to cover the expense involved; and he proposes that the Government shall set itself up as a merchandiser in electric power.

The Republican candidate has studied national problems and has evolved methods of solving them that will stand the test of the Constitution. Gov. Smith has not familiarized himself with these problems, and his offhand "solutions," suggested by the socialist Norris, are barred by the organic law of the United States. Which of these candidates is best fitted to take charge of the Nation's affairs?

MILK AND LONG LIFE.

Dr. George Walker, a medical authority of wide repute, in his address before the dietitians in Baltimore, undertook to outline the path of longevity up to the century mark. In this day of advanced understanding of the importance of adhering generally to received dietetical rules, especially in behalf of children and of invalids, no arguments need be offered in support of the view as a man eats so is he; a formula applicable to mankind and not primarily to the individual. There exists too many pinches of the environment, atmospheric variants, and multitudes of malignant microbes lurking about for any one to lay down a selected food highway and say: "Along this lies long life." Very recently a noted specialist declared that eating has nothing to do with longevity, although it may bear as a factor upon health. Yet another has lately given expression to his view that the majority of people have their life charts laid out, not upon the tables of dietetical regularity, but those of heredity.

In the face of such divergent views any insistence that a pint of milk is a pivotal practice for lengthening life brings the question perilously near to absurdity. Outside of the biblical records of long-living patriarchs, whose names are now supposed to be patronymics rather than those of individuals, there is no evidence that the herders of flocks derive any guarantees of long life by depending largely upon milk and its derivatives of cheeses and curds.

Many of the healthiest persons in years of advanced maturity have not tasted milk since the days of their infancy, and have eschewed cheese and even butter, and in some instances ice cream. Yet Dr. Walker and those who hold to his postulate say that "While there are foods vitally necessary to longevity, one need not worry so much about them if milk is a regular item on the diet." The non-milk drinkers do not propose objection to milk being an important and usually wholesome article of diet, but they do not like to be relegated to a class that early eventuates into cadavers through not drinking milk. When the promise was made, "With long life I will honor thee," nothing was said of milk, but the moral and intellectual worth of the individual was had in mind. On the other hand, the prescription, "Eat what is set before thee and ask no questions, for conscience sake" may be agreed to be a ritualistic and not a dietetic bit of advice.

Fortunately amid the multitude of counsels concerning longer living "there woe noth wisdom," and the dietitians have contributed splendidly to human health, whether or not they have advanced appreciably the length of life.

THE WOMAN VOTE.

Despite the prediction the woman vote would merely be numerical and by no means discriminating, that it would be a case of inaugurating household voting in lieu of voting by the male members of the family, the facts disclosed in this campaign show that the households will be divided. The casting of a solid household vote will not be the rule. Senator and Mrs. Norris are cited in the dispatches as agreeing to disagree politically. It is an example of the widespread refusal of wives and daughters to follow husbands and fathers in voting.

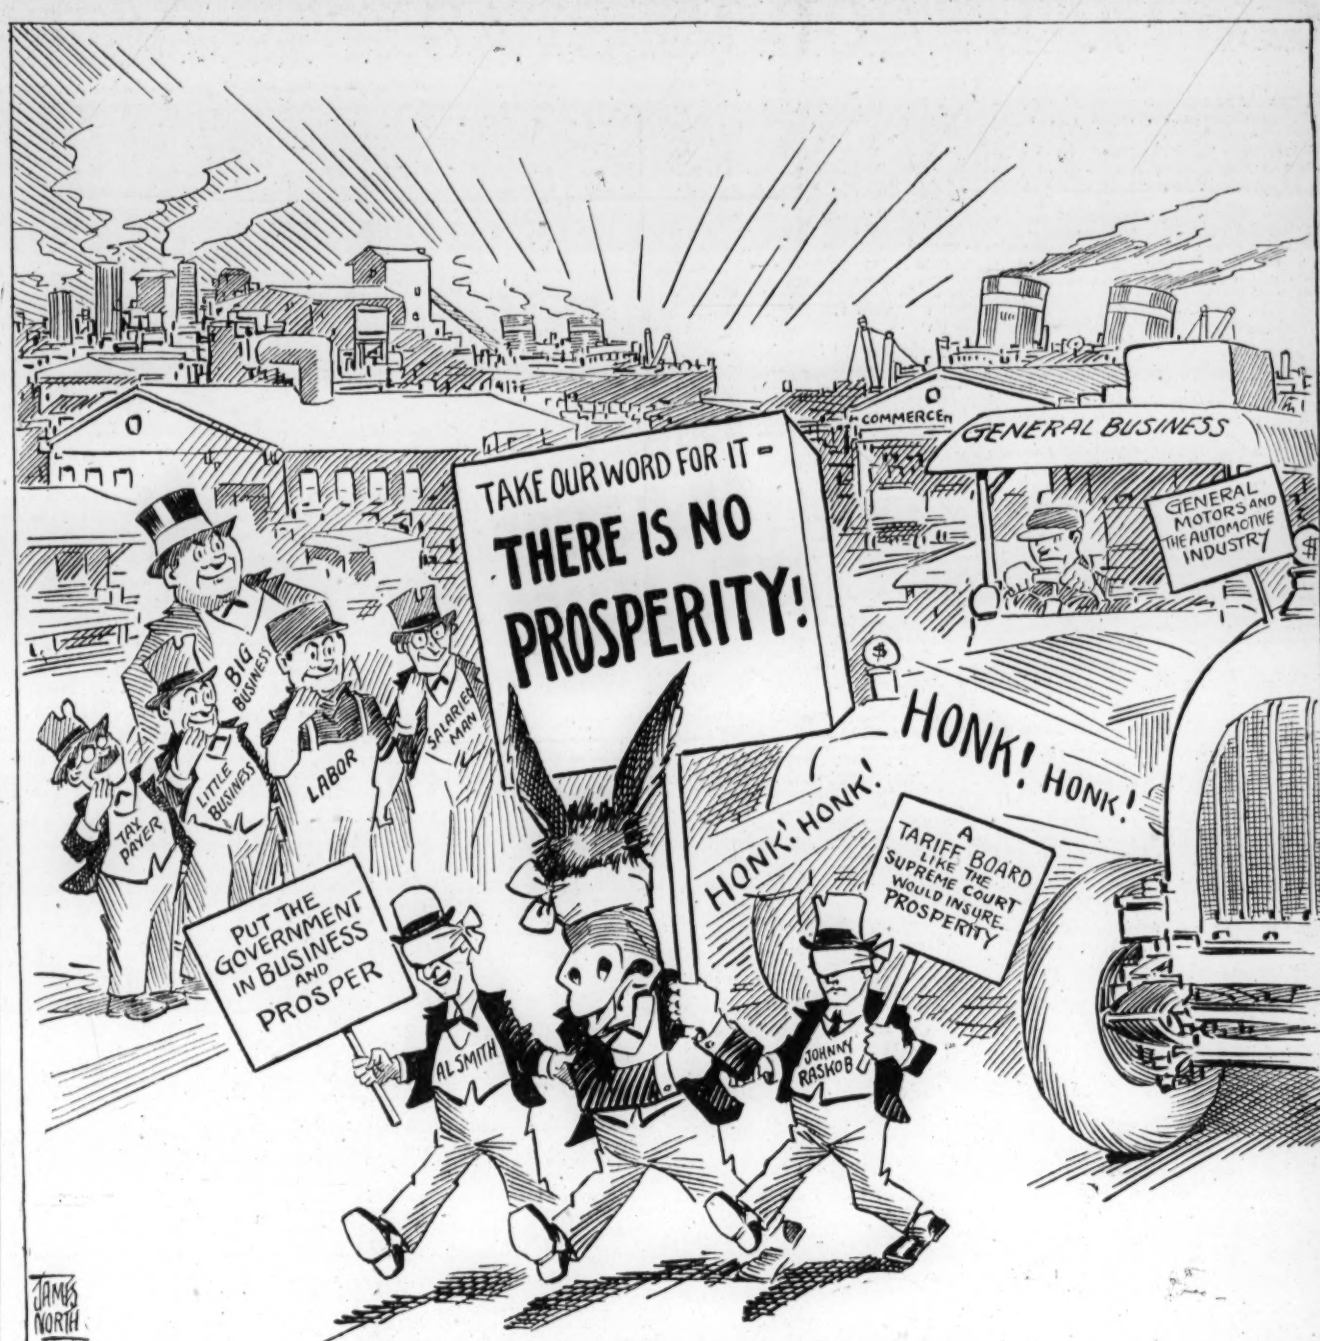

Party managers concede that the women's vote will be a vote of independence and of personal choice. The tendencies of this vote have been forecast according to the wishes and desires of the party leaders.

It is a tribute to the wisdom of the women of the land that they should exercise an independent attitude in voting. There is no "solidarity" of the vote of the sex. No politician carries the women's vote up his sleeve. Hence a great body of the electorate that has not had years of voting practice will choose between parties and the candidates upon grounds that appeal to them.

ATHLETIC BIG BUSINESS.

Yale University's gross revenue from football during the 1927 season amounted to $1,033,211. The figure was made public in the recently released financial statement of the Yale University Athletic Association. All in all organized athletics at Yale last year brought in a total revenue of $1,119,280 with attendant direct expenses, including payments to visiting teams, of $770,731. All other sports, however, rolled up deficits, in addition to which the association deliberately increased its expense account to "construct, expand and improve athletic facilities for use by the undergraduates." Consequently, at the close of the fiscal year June 30 last, the association had incurred a net deficit of $40,000, more than covered, however, by a $42,000 surplus remaining at the close of the preceding year.

Protests and complaints are now in order. A struggling college in Iowa will seize upon these figures to prove that America has no interest in matters educational except as they are connected with athletic teams. A worthy, but financially handicapped scientific institution, will point toward Yale's million-dollar athletic budget as indicating that an unfair discrimination is drawn against intellectual effort. Each year the financial statement of the Yale Athletic Association becomes "Exhibit A" for those whose complaint is against the emphasis that is placed upon college athletics. This year will prove no exception.

There is none so blind as they that won't see.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Two Thanksgiving Days.
To the Editor of The Post—Sir: On November 29 we are called upon by our President to gather in our respective churches or communities and give thanks to God for the blessings received during the year.

It seems to me that immediately after election day we should have another day set apart for all people in every part of our beloved country to give thanks that this unprecedented presidential campaign is over. Our children should be told that what they saw and heard was not a typical campaign, but the most disgraceful, cowardly, venomous outpouring of misstatements, half-truths, mean personal attacks that this country has ever seen in all of its hundred and odd years.

W. C. LOOKER.

The Government in Business.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorial titled "Smith vs. John Marshall" calls vigorous attention to the drift of public feeling toward Socialism, by the renewed agitation for Government operation of business enterprises. Your citation from the opinion of Chief Justice Marshall's opinion in the case of McCulloch vs. Maryland brings up the question, did not Congress act without constitutional authority when it entered into the ship-building business? could be justified only on the ground of national defense. Under the clause in the Constitution giving Congress control over commerce between the States many things have been done that the makers of the Constitution never dreamed of.

The rights of States have been invaded, and the right to control his own property taken from the individual investor. Under it attempts have been made to control child labor throughout the country. It is reasonable to expect that other and graver attempts will be attempted in the future unless a curb is put on congressional action.

In another editorial in the same issue of The Post you state a grand truth when you say: "The security of American business rests not upon the foundation of the impossible ideal but upon the practically possible." How can American business have security when the "impossible ideal" is continually projected by some idealist like Gov. Smith and other advocates of Government operation of business? What American business wants is stability, and not the uncertainty of threatened invasion by the Government. Government competition would soon destroy private business, and thus destroy that prosperity on which the country rests. It has been demonstrated that the Government can not conduct any business as cheaply as private individuals, but having the public treasury in reserve it can destroy private business and prosperity.

A. F. TOWNSEND.

Modern and Backward, Both.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Fifty per cent of the people of this country drink well water. A Government bureau is making an investigation of the hamlets and countryside where people still draw water from rain or artesian supplies. Included in the number of those who still depend upon subsurface water are many towns of considerable size which have tanks supplied from artesian wells. As recently as the time of Grover Cleveland the White House grounds were the scene of well digging, with the head of the Nation observing the process and expressing wonder that drilling could be made for an artesian well, by sheathing, through a well that was filled with surface water.

Likewise vast areas of the United States are thinly supplied with the conveniences of wired service for light or telephone, and are void of power.

The Silent Vote.

Topeka Capital: A greater orator than Al Smith was fooled by crowds in political campaigns. Nobody received such ovations as William Jennings Bryan. "It can not be," says Gov. Smith, "that these people cheer the way they do and then vote the other way." Maybe they don't. But the cheering crowds, after all, constitute only a minor fraction of the 43,000,000 registered voter. The "silent vote" which politicians on all sides say will decide it, certainly is not the cheering vote.

Big Brother Must Cut the Cake and Protect Little Brother's Slice of It.

By ROBERT QUILEN

WHEN the Reds overthrew and murdered their masters in Russia, they dreamed of a Utopia in which all should be equally rich. The state would own all property; each citizen would contribute his labor; and the profits would be equally divided.

The scheme did not appeal to the peasants. They did not live on scattered farms, as rural citizens do in America, but dwelt in villages and went from home to work as office men do. And when they were told to cultivate the land as one great family and divide the crops, they flatly refused.

Each man was suspicious of his neighbor. "I would do my best," said he, "and Ivan would loaf; and yet he would get as much as I. It is a foolish scheme to benefit the worthless."

So the land was divided among the villagers in proportion to the size of the families. A poor man with a wife and ten children received twice as much land as the well-to-do man who had a wife and four children.

That seemed fair, but there can be no equality except that arranged by Nature. The poor man could not work his great acreage. He lacked tools, seed, machinery. And so he appealed to his richer neighbor to provide these things, and the richer neighbor did—and took half of the crop as reward for his neighborly assistance.

And now each village has its three classes: The rich, the middle class and the poor, and the conditions are much as they were before Utopia was discovered. The strong, intelligent and ambitious have much, and the weak, foolish and indolent have little.

The favorite dream of the poor is an equality of riches. "There is enough for all," they say. "Divide it equally and there will be no more poverty forever."

But calling the fast runners back to start again at scratch will not make them slow—or will it make slow runners fast.

Divide the wealth today, and tomorrow two-thirds of it will be in the hands of the strong. Within a fortnight they will have nine-tenths of it. A man who hasn't the ability to get hasn't the ability to keep. The strong do not rob the weak as they once did. Public opinion won't permit it. And a new understanding of the responsibility that accompanies power and wealth is causing rich men to become humanitarians and philanthropists. They win because they are strong, but more they regard themselves as trustees of wealth.

Rockefeller gives millions, but he and his kind would fight bitterly if government endeavored to make them give.

Give men time and they will work out a plan for the fair division of wealth, but the law can not advance faster than public opinion. It must wait upon man's willingness to obey.

The final Utopia will be established and directed by the strong, for the weak can keep what is given them by the strong, but can't keep what they seize from the strong.

(Copyright, 1928.)

One-third of the homes of the country are thus backward, yet these may be placed in comparison with railroad systems puffing their smoke into the faces of modern cities, with only 4 per cent of their total mileage electrified.

Many persons are not enamored of some of the modern conveniences, and prefer to live in simplicity, even with a degree of isolation. Still, this spirit, which is akin to that of the protesters against floor carpets and glass windows in early England, is being routed by the extension of modern service throughout the land. As for the railroads, they certainly have no charge of lack of progressiveness to be laid at their doors, with road bus competition to stimulate them to adopt electricity where this can counter the competition. It is a big country, and with only a portion of the people supplied, water, telephone, telegraph, gas, light and similar services have invested $30,000,000,000. What will the investment be when everybody is served with modern conveniences? CLARENCE ROSS.

NEW HIGH RECORDS.

The year 1928 is now sufficiently far advanced to give a fair idea of its final standing with previous years in point of general production and trade, says the monthly bulletin of the National City Bank of New York. From a beginning clouded with doubt and uncertainty, the year has brought steadily improving business until it now appears likely that the aggregate physical volume of production and trade will exceed that of any previous year.

Following is a list of the more commonly known measures of business volume which appear to be headed for new high records in 1928:

Checks cashed at banks.
Industrial use of electric power.
Building construction.
Steel production.
Automobile production.
Agricultural implement output.
Copper production.
Tin deliveries to mills.
Cement production.
Gasoline production.
Industrial use of rubber.
Industrial use of silk.
Industrial use of chemicals.
Rayon production.
Cigarette production.
Retail trade.
Electrical appliances output.
Aeroplane production.
Motorboat output.

Of particular significance is the high level of activity of the building, steel and automobile industries. Reflecting as these industries do the activity of hundreds of dependent lines for which statistics are not available or whose figures are too small to be considered separately, their prosperity lends further emphasis to the claims of 1928 as one of the greatest years for American business.

PRESS COMMENT

Only Beets Blush.
Blue Mountain Eagle: About the only thing left in this world that can be shocked is grain.

These Are Claiming Days.
Boston Transcript: Both sides are now claiming Congress, but both sides are also claiming about everything else.

Undertakers Need Business.
Philadelphia Inquirer: Personally, we would be more in favor of expensive funerals for gangsters if there were more of them.

Getting Hard Boiled.
Toledo Blade: Middle age is that period of life when the reader can go to bed and leave the hero in the hands of his worst enemy.

Boston Globe: If there's any place that hasn't been flown to yet, it should apply at once to the nearest aviator and get on the map.

A Conservative Man.
Milwaukee Journal: An Indiana man has won the same collar button for 43 years. We'll bet a week's pay that he never has boiled his party's ticket.

Vegetable Garden.
Detroit News: Some one wanted to know what they grow in Madison Square Garden, and 907 humorists arose as one man and said cauliflowers.

Two Good Men.
Atchison Globe: When you go to the polls to vote next Tuesday it will be well to remember that two mighty fine men are running for the Presidency of the United States.

Bow Tie Stabilization.
Minneapolis Journal: The ready-made bow tie for men is now popular, but what it sadly needs, in the view of a Missouri paper, is a port fan, or a stabilizer, to keep it on an even keel.

Overhead.
Detroit News: The tax collectors are in a row with Alice Brady for deducting $1,524 for facial massages in her return. It is conceded if it had been permanents and finger waves, Alice could have marked it up to overhead.

Same as Uncle Sam.
St. Louis Post Dispatch: The Chinese being comparatively new to the problems of government, it is going to take them considerable time to figure out if the domestic problems are foreign or if the foreign problems are domestic.

All Pro.
Philadelphia Ledger: It is said that in most elections the majority of people vote "against" rather than "for."

Whether this is true or not in the United States and elsewhere, it certainly was not true in yesterday's election in Cuba. The reason is simple: There was no one to vote against. President Machado was the only candidate for the presidency and the only other office to be filled was not contested. The experiment seems to have proved a complete success. There was plenty of excitement, but no bones were broken, as is usual in Cuban campaigns. There was not a hint of intervention by the United States. Seventy-five per cent of the electorate is believed to have turned out. No candidate and no party sustained defeat. No scars were left in the body politic. The word "overwhelming" is altogether too mild to apply to President Machado's majority. All in all, it was a just about perfect election, and if everybody in Cuba is not happy, it may be because politics, even when it approaches perfection, does not always bring happiness.

SHALLOW DRAMAS USHERED IN TODAY

STAGE VETERAN
ALSO HAS FINE SCREEN RECORD

High in the list of screen character actors who may always be depended upon for capable, conscientious and artistic acting, frequently walking away with first honors in any picture in which they appear, is Alec B. Francis, who has the role of Dr. Redmayne, the owner of the sanitarium, in "The Terror," the Warner Bros. all-talking Vitaphone picture now at the Earle Theater.

Mr. Francis has been in films for the past twenty years. He is not technically "starred" for the "star" role in pictures is usually the young lover, but he has long been "featured" and in many productions is the actual, if not the billed, star.

Mr. Francis, a native of England, had a long stage career in musical comedies, comic opera and in plays—in South Africa, India, England and the United States—before he turned his attention to the silent drama in 1910. Since that date his name has been seen frequently in the casts of productions from many of the big companies.

A signal honor was paid to him when David Belasco gave him the O. K. to the selection of Mr. Francis to play on the screen the two roles which had made David Warfield's name a household word throughout the country—"The Music Master" and "The Return of Peter Grimm." He was also selected to act on the screen the stage role that brought Richard Mansfield into prominence and popularity, that of "Beau Brummell."

A few of his other most important roles were in "Smilin' Through" and "Camille" with Norma Talmadge; First National's "Shepherd of the Hills" and "Gold Digger" and in "Earthbound" and "Godless Men."

A BEAUTY WHO PROVED TO BE WIDELY GIFTED

Cinema's wheel of chance revolves only to stop with surprising results sometimes.

Mary Astor has a distinctive type of ethereal beauty that seemed to doom her to play "pretty" roles. Then came the day when Fox decided to make a crook picture, with a revivified and regenerated Mary Astor playing the leading feminine role.

This beautiful girl, graceful and willowy with silken auburn tresses, was born in Quincy, Ill., where her father was a teacher of languages in the Quincy High School.

With the World War the family moved to Chicago, where her father had been engaged as a teacher in the public schools and her mother taught drama and English literature in the Kenwood Loring School for Girls.

Mrs. Astor had high hopes of a stage career for her daughter, and at the age of 14 she took the girl to New York City.

Her grace and beauty won her an opportunity to appear in a successful series of two reel pictures made by Tri-Art. Later she appeared in an important role in a full length feature, "The Beggar Maid."

Her first real chance came when Douglas Fairbanks selected her as his lead in "Don Q." This prestige won her a contract with First National, where she had many choice leads, appearing in "Playing With Swords," "The Face That Kills," "The Scarlet Saint" and "Forever After."

With the expiration of her First National contract she went to Fox Films and her work in "Dressed to Kill" and "Intrigued Winfield" shone, vice president of Fox, that he signed her to a five-year contract. Her first lead in her new contract is "A Dry Martini," now at the Fox.

A DIRECTOR IS APPRAISER OF HIS OWN WORK

"Man, Woman and Wife" is a study in the effect of fear upon a man and how it can change his position high in social circles, to one of degradation in New York's underworld. With his regeneration through the efforts of a woman of the street, he meets with a situation of extreme danger and breaks down under the pressure of fear and cowardice that lurk in his breast, to insure the happiness of his former wife.

The story also provides a tremendous argument against the eternal sex triangle and proves the wisdom of the writers in asserting that a man does not suddenly love more than one woman at the same time.

The ending of the story is one of the most powerful and unusual I have ever been privileged to direct," says Edward Laemmle.

"The situations are different from those generally encountered in a motion picture. I tried to make the play respond in a way that was suitable to the story. Norman Kerry and Pauline Starke both gave me unusual portrayals. As a matter of fact, the entire cast did exceptional work."

"Man, Woman and Wife" is the current screen attraction at the Rialto.

Air Parley Envoys
Named by CoolidgeWhiting Heads Delegation to Civil Flying Conference in Capital.

(Associated Press.) President Coolidge yesterday appointed a delegation of twelve, headed by Secretary Whiting and including Charles A. Lindbergh and Orville Wright, to represent the United States at the International Conference on Civil Aeronautics to be held in Washington, December 12, 13 and 14.

The other members of the delegation are Senator Bingham, of Connecticut; Assistant Secretary Nelson T. Johnson of the State Department; F. Trubee Davidson, Assistant Secretary of War for Aviation; W. Irving Glover, Assistant Postmaster General; Edward P. Warner, Assistant Secretary of the Navy for Aeronautics; William P. MacCracken, Assistant Secretary of Commerce in charge of aviation; Lester N. Gardner, of New York; Harry Guggenheim, of New York; and Joseph S. Ames, of Maryland.

Immigration Committee
Will Meet November 21

(Associated Press.) Chairman Albert Johnson yesterday called members of the House committee on immigration to meet here November 21 for consideration of bills on the committee calendar.

The committee, one of the few authorized to sit between sessions of Congress, was considering a bill to restrict immigration from Mexico at the time of adjournment in May, and this will be taken up on reconvening.

TO ORDER FOR GISH PICTURE

Making weather to order on the largest scale ever attempted in pictures was the strange task carried out in the filming of "The Wind." Lillian Gish's new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer starring vehicle, synchronized with sound, and with a surrounding sound program, which is now playing at Loew's Palace, Windstorms, tempests and even a tornado were duplicated for the screen by engineering science.

Complete details of the storms which were staged on the Mojave Desert were worked out by the engineering department at the studio. The plans read like some fanciful novel of a strange scientist who could control weather; but instead of being fanciful, the work was extremely practical.

The tornado, for instance, was produced just as an actual artificial tornado was recently produced at Washington in the laboratories of the United States Weather Bureau.

In the Government laboratory a series of fans, playing into a wide-open space in a box-in-room of the laboratory, were used to duplicate the tornado's action. The same means were employed on a larger scale with giant airplane propellers and even larger fans propelled by electricity, and the wide-open spaces of the Mojave Desert replacing the inclosed room.

"The making of a tornado in miniature," says Lou Kolb, chief electrical engineer at the studio, "may be best explained by a room and a door. If one suddenly opens a door in a room where the air is perfectly still, swinging the door in sharply, little whirlwinds can be seen to fly into the room, if there is smoke or dust present to make them visible in swirls. The reason is that door, flying in displaces the air in the room, causing it to fly outward, while at the same time, it sucks in after it another current."

Thus two currents of air pass each other at a considerable speed, and each exerts a pull on the other in the direction of the other in the opposite, over the floor of the desert. Between them will be generated an absolutely controllable tornado, which the camera will film at will. The tornado will be available by throwing a switch."

Numerous irrelevant sophisticates have been known to go into uncontrolled spasms of mirth at the sight of a certain earnest youth in the magazines. He startled, you may recall, a totally unexpected audience in the salon with some fascinating information he had picked up in twelve minutes of weekly reading from Gilbert Cupboard's scrapbook. These cynics must either shift their guffawing activities to another section of the comic scene—or begin to realize, good and seriously, that it is actually possible to draw authentic and valuable data from a source only casually and briefly scanned.

It won't be long now before the passionate accumulators of stray facts come instead of Loew's Columbia Theater, now housing Samuel Goldwyn's "Two Lovers," the last picture to present Ronald Colman and Vilma Banky opposite each other, and spiel off a long list of historical events that is certain to knock the most anagrammatic party off its inadequate feet.

This romantic costume drama of two politically opposed youngsters contains more square feet of famous characters and incidents than ever found their way into one roll of interrelated narrative. Next time, then, that you hear some one who has hitherto taken no part in the conversation suddenly erupt into their guffawing activities to another section of the comic scene—or begin to realize, good and seriously, that it is actually possible to draw authentic and valuable data from a source only casually and briefly scanned.

Next time all this crashes into your consciousness, you can rest easy in the knowledge that the speaker has only recently emerged from a view of the last romantic film in which Ronald Colman and Vilma Banky exercise joint efforts, and that its wealth of information has proved a trifle too much for him.

JUDGE LINDSEY
DEFINES VIEWS ON MATRIMONY

The First National film, "Companionate Marriage," based upon dramatic incidents in Judge Ben B. Lindsey's book of that title, which is now on the screen at the Metropolitan Theater, has already let loose a bigger flood of comment, of attack and of advocacy than the book. There still seems to be as much haziness on the part of the public as to what Judge Lindsey means by companionate marriage as there was when the book was placed on sale.

In an attempt to clarify this misapprehension Judge Lindsey has prepared a further definition of companionate marriage.

"The companionate marriage is a proposed legalization, stabilization and scientific direction of the customs, privileges and practices of modern marriage to wit: (a) birth control, and (b) divorce by mutual consent by persons who, having no children, can not remain married of mutual consent; such divorce to be granted only after a court of domestic relations, with the aid of specialists, through the House of Human Welfare, has failed in a humane and scientific effort to reconcile the couple; (c) alimony in such cases of childless marriages not to be the arbitrary right of the wife, but to be allowed when, in the judgment of the court, circumstances justify it; property rights of childless couples to be determined with reference to the economic status of the parties in each case; such marriage to be known as 'companionate marriage' until the arrival of children and as 'the family' after that; (d) to which is added the proposal that the State should undertake the education of youth and married couples in the laws of love, sex and life, in order to equip them for marriage and parenthood. (2) any period in marriage during which the marriage lacks dependent children. (3)

Eight pages of striking pictures, chosen with taste and displayed with artistic skill.

MAKE "BIG NEWS" PAY

ONE HUNDRED COLUMNS of reading matter appear each week day in The Washington Post. More than double that amount is published in a Sunday issue.

All sorts of news is included in these totals. Some is "Big News," but not all of it.

Can you tell which is "Big News" and why? The Washington Post offers every school child in the District of Columbia, Alexandria, and Arlington, Prince Georges and Montgomery Counties the opportunity to say just what is "Big News" in weekly 250-word essays.

The contest will open with the week which begins Armistice Day, Sunday, November 11.

A $5 award will be announced each week in two classes—one to the grade or junior high school pupil whose "Big News" essay is judged the best; another to the high school pupil whose essay is similarly ranked.

At the end of each quarter—the first quarter will close the Sunday before Christmas—a single $20-prize will be given to the essay selected as the best over the quarterly period preceding that date.

Rules of the Big News Contest

- "Big News" essays must be written by bona-fide students of any school in the District of Columbia, Alexandria and Arlington and Prince Georges or Montgomery Counties.
- "Big News" essays must not be more than 250 words in length.
- "Big News" essays must discuss some event which has been reported during the week in The Washington Post.
- A week for the purposes of the "Big News" contest shall run from Sunday through Saturday.
- "Big News" essays must reach The Washington Post not later than Wednesday of the week following the contest week for which they are submitted.
- "Big News" essays must be written on one side of the paper only.
- Contestants in the "Big News" contest should state for what reasons they believe the subject they have selected deserves to be considered the "Big News" of the week and discuss the bearing which the "Big News" topic selected will have on the future of the Nation or the world.
- The Washington Post shall be the sole judge of the merits of all "Big News" essays submitted.
- Awards will be announced each week in The Sunday Washington Post.
- "Big News" essays should be plainly addressed to the

Reckless Driver
Given 7 Months

Man Is Convicted on First and Second Offenses Simultaneously.

Convicted of a first and second offense of reckless driving simultaneously yesterday, Robert Dolman, colored, was sentenced by Judge Robert E. Mattingly in Traffic Court to pay a total fine of $600, or serve seven months in the District Jail. He was committed to jail last night in default of the fine.

The charges were the outgrowth of an alleged liquor chase on July 23, 1927. Policeman George Helms testified that the prisoner leaped from a pursued automobile, which crashed into a tree and escaped before the trailing policeman could arrive on the scene. A search was launched for the negro and the following day another chase ensued.

Policeman Anthony Ritchie declared that while he was chasing Dolman on the second occasion, the negro again escaped by leaping from his speeding automobile, which narrowly escaped striking a group of children before crashing into a fence. The search for the negro continued for a year and he was recently arrested on a warrant.

The court sentenced Dolman to a fine of $100 or 30 days on the first charge and $500 or 180 days on the second charge, the sentences to run concurrently.

Main States, and it has risen in the northwest.

The Illinois disturbance will likely move northeastward and it will be attended by rain over practically all sections east of the Mississippi River within the next 24 hours. The rain will probably change to snow flurries in the upper Ohio Valley and the lower Lake region Saturday night or Sunday. The weather will clear Sunday in middle and southern sections east of the Mississippi River. Colder weather will over-spread the Ohio Valley, Tennessee and the East Gulf States within the next 24 hours, and in the lower Lake region and the Atlantic States by or during Sunday.

HEAVY LABOR GAINS IN ENGLISH VOTING

Women Also Do Well in City
Elections, Many Being Chosen at Polls.

SALFORD SOCIALIST FAILS

London, Nov. 2 (A.P.).—Laborites were jubilant today with the results of the municipal elections throughout England, the Labor party having gained 137 seats in London and the provinces on the basis of early tabulations.

In London the Labor party gained 77 seats net, while in the provinces they gained 111. Of a total of 696 of their candidates, 332 thus far had been elected.

The Liberals gained 17 here and 15 in the provinces. The Conservatives lost 95 seats here.

Of 451 women candidates, London elected 180.

"It is only another indication, and a very certain one, of how the tide is flowing," said Ramsay MacDonald, the Labor leader, in discussing the Labor party's successes.

Conservative headquarters, on the other hand, declared that the results were no indication of what was going to happen at next year's general election. "No real political significance can be attached to the results because the issues upon which local elections were fought differ so much from the parliamentary contests," said one official.

One striking result of the election was the defeat at Salford of Councillor Corbey, Socialist, who had been selected by his party as the next mayor. Mr. Corbey had announced that he "had no use" for churches, and therefore would not head the council in the customary church attendance following his installation as mayor, nor would he attend the Armistice Day celebrations because he disliked the idea of "opening old wounds." Corbey further declared he would not attend functions in evening dress, and while he would drink the royal toast, he would not rise for it. Religious bodies of Salford launched a concentrated attack against him. As a rule a mayor is elected by acclamation, as each party takes a turn in making the nomination, but Corbey, nevertheless, was defeated.

Triplets Named After Smith, Hoover, Thomas

Passaic, N. J., Nov. 2 (A.P.).—There is at least one strictly nonpartisan family in this municipality, it appears. Triplets, all boys, were born to Mrs. R. R. Calvert today. They were named Herbert Hoover Calvert, Alfred Smith Calvert and Norman Thomas Calvert.

"Taken for Ride," Thug's Body Shows

"Graveyard" of Gangsters on Long Island Yields
"Angel Face" Howard.

New York, Nov. 2.—Another victim landed on New York gunmen's favorite Long Island dumping ground—the lonely road between Cavalry Cemetery and the Standard Oil Co.'s Newtown Creek plant in Queens—early today. He was "Angel Face Joe" Howard, notorious thug.

This evidence indicated that some body had "taken him for a ride." Five bullet holes had been drilled into his head and back, but there was little blood on the spot where his body was found. Police believe the murder was the work of warring gangsters, but tonight no arrests had been made. "Angel Face" was the fifth to be dumped in that location recently by mysterious slayers. "Dutch Miller," safe-blower, was the first. William L. D'Olier, Queens sewer graft witness, was found shot to death there only recently. There were two others of lesser note.

Court Orders Woman Not to Attack Spouse

Tampa, Fla., Nov. 2 (A.P.).—A Tampa husband was at liberty today, safeguarded by a court order which directed that his wife must not attack or molest him.

E. E. Freeman, grain merchant, sought protection of the court yesterday, declaring that his wife pursued him recently, calling him "vile names in public" and had threatened to kill him if he attempted to remove his personal effects from their home. Freeman, moreover, alleged his wife had threatened to "horsewhip him" in public and to take possession of all his property.

Rain Holds Up Youth Flying Across Nation

Salt Lake City, Utah, Nov. 2 (A.P.).—Richard E. James, 17-year-old New York aviator engaged in an attempted transcontinental flight for a $1,000 prize, was held up here today by stormy weather. Rainfall gave little promise of an early opportunity for him to continue eastward.

4 Bodies in Fire Ruins Following Ax Killings

Santa Rosa, Calif., Nov. 2 (A.P.).—An ax murderer, identity undetermined, to day wiped out the C. J. Bertola family of three, set fire to the dwelling and is believed to have committed suicide by shooting himself.

The known victims were C. J. Bertola, 69, retired grocer; his wife, Maria, and their daughter, Camille, 25. A fourth charred body, believed to be that of the slayer, was found in the ruins

BISHOP FREEMAN'S SERMON OVER RADIO

Capital Prelate Will Preach at Evensong in Chapel of Cathedral.

OTHER SERMONS SLATED

The Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, will be the special preacher in the Bethlehem Chapel of the Washington Cathedral tomorrow, at the 4 o'clock peoples evensong. This service will be broadcast over radio station W. T. P.

Bishop Freeman has a large following of radio listeners, who will greet his return to the air after a month's absence, due to the special services at the Cathedral for the general convention.

At the 11 o'clock service tomorrow in Bethlehem Chapel, the special preacher will be the Rev. Dr. Henry Lubek, of New York City. Dr. Lubek came to Washington for the general convention and remained over at the request of the Rev. Dr. Ze Barney Phillips, rector of Epiphany, in order to be at the service tomorrow. Dr. Phillips will commence a special series of sermons on the "Voices of the Convention" at the evening service.

There will be two celebrations of Holy Communion, at 7:30 and 11 o'clock, tomorrow morning at St. Margaret's Church. "Voices of the Convention" will be the sermon topic of the rector, the Rev. Herbert Scott Smith, at the 11 o'clock service. At the 4:30 o'clock service tomorrow afternoon St. Margaret's choir will present the first of the monthly musical services to be held during the winter.

The Rev. Clarence Prentice Parker, rector of St. John's Church, Bethesda, will continue his sermons on "Highlights of the General Convention" at the 11 o'clock service tomorrow morning. Holy Communion will be celebrated at 7:30 o'clock and there will be Holy Communion and a sermon at 11 o'clock.

The Rev. J. J. Quessy, rector, will officiate at all services tomorrow in the Church of the Transfiguration. Holy Communion will be celebrated at 7:30 o'clock and there will be Holy Communion and a sermon at 11 o'clock. "The Making of a Normal Man" will be the sermon topic of the Rev. Florian Vurpillot, pastor of the French Congregation, which meets at St. John's Church, Lafayette Square, at 4 o'clock tomorrow afternoon.

Chevy Chase Catholic School to Be Started

The corner stone of the new Catholic School in Chevy Chase will be laid by the Most Rev. Michael J. Curley, Archbishop of Baltimore, at 11 o'clock tomorrow morning. Archbishop Curley will be assisted by the Rev. Thomas G. Smyth, pastor of the Shrine of the Most Blessed Sacrament, and the Very Rev. Ignatius Smith, rector of the Dominican House of Studies.

The new school will be built of granite and will be an addition to the group of buildings which have been erected during the past four years to care for the children of the Sacred Heart Parish in Chevy Chase. The new school will provide accommodations for 500 children.

Employees of Telephone Company to Hold Picnic

Employees of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. will hold their annual field day and oyster roast at Beaver Dam Country Club today.

Outdoor games, including a golf tournament which has been arranged by R. H. Davidson, J. W. Latham and John C. White, will feature the meeting. Dinner will be served at 6 o'clock. Speeches, songs and humorous stunts will be on the program, according to a statement made by John C. White, president of the Telephone Society of Washington, which is sponsoring the affair.

Kellogg Will Telephone To Austrian City Today

(Associated Press.) Transatlantic telephone communication will be inaugurated between the United States and Austria at 10:30 o'clock today, when Secretary Kellogg will converse with Dr. Ignatz Seipel, chancellor of Austria.

Edgar Prochnik, the Austrian Minister to the United States, also will talk with Dr. Seipel, and J. Reuben Clark, under Secretary of State, will converse with Albert H. Washburn, American Minister at Vienna.

Endeavor Union Meeting

The November meeting of the Intermediate Christian Endeavor Union will be held at the United Brethren Church, Friday evening. Each society president will outline plans for the coming year.

Modern Problems' Relation To Religion Will Be Subject

Rev. J. R. Sizoo, New York Avenue Presbyterian Church
Pastor, to Answer Questionnaires. Evangelist to Preach at Bethany Baptist.

The Rev. Joseph R. Sizoo, pastor of the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church, will inaugurate a discussion and questionnaire on "Studies in Religion" at the 8 o'clock services tomorrow evening. These Sunday discussions have been undertaken by Dr. Sizoo in answer to requests that have reached him, both in writing and in conferences, from many persons. They will deal with vital problems affecting modern life and thought, and a questionnaire has been arranged for those who wish to make inquiries at the close of each discussion.

Among the subjects to be taken up by Dr. Sizoo during the next two months are the following: "Can We Be Sure of God?" "Would Jesus Join a Church Today and Which One?" "How Can Jesus Solve the Problems of Today, Which He Never Met?" "Does Psychology Displace Religion?" "Why I Accept the Bible as Inspired." "Does Prayer Change Anything?" "When Is a Man a Christian?" "What Is the Trinity?" "What Does the Cross Need Most?" "Do We Need the Cross?" "Is Every Man's Religion Right or Wrong?" and "What Is Success?"

"Christianity and Healing" and "Can Religion Heal Diseases" are the topics on which the Rev. Moses P. Lovell, evangelist, will speak tomorrow morning. At 6 o'clock tomorrow afternoon, Dr. Lucile Dooley, psychiatrist, will begin the series on "Psychology and Religion," with a discussion on the subject "The Making of a Normal Man." A discussion group of younger members of the congregation will consider the condition of the human race after the World War.

Bethany Baptist Church has obtained the services of the Rev. L. H. Miller, evangelist, and Charles O. Miller, evangelist, to assist the pastor, the Rev. Hugh T. Stevenson, in a series of special evangelistic meetings, commencing tomorrow morning.

Continuing the theme of "The Church Covenant," the Rev. Edward O. Clark, pastor of Chevy Chase Baptist Church, will deliver his subject "Praying, Singing and Christian." Miss Elizabeth Kridler will lead the service of the Senior Epworth League.

After extensive repairs and improvements, McKendree Methodist Church has reopened its auditorium. It was announced yesterday. An elaborate musical program has been prepared by the pastor, the Rev. William Pierpont, who will preach at both morning and evening services tomorrow. His morning subject will be "What God Requires" and in the evening

Dr. W. A. Lambeth, pastor, will preach on "The Missionary Passion" at Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church tomorrow morning. At the junior congregation service, the Rev. Haskell R. Deal, junior preacher, will have as his sermon topic "Sharing with Others."

The pastor will preach at the 8 o'clock service, using his subject "Praying, Singing and Christian." Miss Elizabeth Kridler will lead the service of the Senior Epworth League.

Cumberland Exercises.

Special to The Washington Post.
Cumberland, Md., Nov. 2.—Field Day of the Third Maryland Division, Knights Templar, was held here this afternoon. The parade included St. Bernard Commandery, Hagerstown; Jacques De Molay Commandery, Frederick; Antioch Commandery, Cumberland, and delegations from Rockville and Hyattsville.

The procession was led by Division Commander Grant A. Wiebel and staff, followed by Grand Commander George A. Smith, of Baltimore, and staff. All Grand Temple Shrine Bands, Tail Coads Drum Corps of Hagerstown, and All Grand Temple Drum Corps were in line. There were also representations of Knights from West Virginia and Pennsylvania. A drill was given at the State Army, where a ball was held tonight.

Gen. Bramwell Booth Ill; Must Obtain Rest

London, Nov. 2 (A.P.).—The health of Gen. Bramwell Booth is causing some anxiety.

A bulletin issued by the Salvation Army headquarters today said that he was suffering from nervous prostration and that it was essential he have a complete rest for several months which it was hoped would insure his complete recovery.

Gen. Booth, who is 72 years old, is the eldest son of the late Gen. Booth, founder of the Salvation Army.

Capt. G. W. Gillette Sent To Duty at Fort Logan

Capt. George W. Gillette, Corps of Engineers, who has been an assistant director of the Office of Public Buildings and Public Parks of the National Capital since September, has been ordered to duty with the Second Engineers at Fort Logan, Colo.

His successor here has not yet been named. Capt. Gillette came here from Kansas City, Mo., where he was instructor of National Guard troops, to succeed Capt. Harris Jones, sent to Paris for work with the American Battle Monument Commission.

CAPITAL POLICEMAN ABANDONS CHASE AT MARYLAND BORDER

Trio Permitted to Escape
Over Line Are Believed Constable's Assaults.

VICTIMS OF AUTO CRASH TURN ON INVESTIGATOR

Several Cuffs Are Followed by Prince Georges and City Detectives.

Three men, believed to be the same men who assaulted Prince Georges County Constable A. C. Thompson near Surrattsville, Md., early yesterday morning, were chased into Maryland by a short time before the time of the assault by motorcycle policeman M. Zaminowski, of the Fifth Precinct, who abandoned the chase when he found he was in Maryland.

Constable Thompson answered an anonymous telephone call, which he received at 3 o'clock yesterday morning, which told him that three automobiles had been involved in a collision near Surrattsville and that the occupants of the cars had engaged in a free-for-all fight. Thompson went to the scene of the accident and climbed from his automobile to investigate, when he was set upon by seven men who evidently were the occupants of the wrecked machines.

He was severely beaten and then bundled into his automobile in an unconscious condition. The keys to his car were thrown away and the bullets in his pistol were taken out. The men then abandoned two small sedans and fled the scene after leaving off the license tags on the machines.

License May Be Clue.

Thompson was found shortly after the assault by Prince Georges County policeman Frank P. Prince and Maryland State policeman L. E. Dutrow. The latter two found a license tag nearby which was issued to George P. Norcia, 1009 Florida avenue northeast, nearby.

A short time later a wrecking car from Carl's, Inc., appeared on the scene in answer to a telephone summons. They were guided to a large touring car some distance away by a pilot car, but the county police took charge of the car. The pilot car escaped.

The three automobiles were taken to Upper Marlboro in custody of Sheriff Charles S. Early, where they await claimants.

Thompson was taken to his home, near Clinton, Md., suffering from a possible fracture of the jaw, the loss of several teeth and bruises on the body.

Policeman Zaminowski said last night that he had been stationed on the top of Good Hope Hill when he saw a large touring car which was speeding toward Maryland. He gave chase, but abandoned the chase when he found he was in Maryland. The policeman said he remembered that several other policemen who chased motorists into Maryland had been criticized and that this influenced his decision to abandon the pursuit.

Later Arrest Three Men.

Later in the morning he was accused by a state agent of the investigation Post and told that three men had attempted to stop the agent near where the accident occurred. Seeing three men in a different car who appeared to be the same trio, he arrested them and took them to the Eleventh Precinct station house for investigation. After questioning the men he released them, only to receive notice twenty minutes later, that Prince Georges police were looking for the three men and their description in connection with the assault upon Constable Thompson.

Headquarters Detectives Brodie and Varney yesterday arrested Harry I. Friedman, 32 years old, 601 Pennsylvania avenue northwest, as the tags on the pilot car were assigned to him. Friedman and two other suspects were taken before Thompson, but he declared that they were not among the attacking party and had been released. Prince Georges and Washington police have several other clues and expect to make arrests that will clear up the case today.

Young People Hear New York Pastor

Rev. Dr. D. A. Poling Talks on Patriotism to Capital
Church Societies.

The Rev. Dr. Daniel A. Poling, president of the International Society of Christian Endeavor, August 1927, of the Episcopal Church of New York City, last night addressed more than 200 members of the interdenominational committee of young people on the "Challenge of Patriotism," at a rally held at the First Baptist Church, Fourteenth and D streets northwest. In referring to a recent statement by Gov. Alfred E. Smith, of New York, that prohibition has caused drinking among young people, Dr. Poling declared that the American boy and girl of today is just as good morally as in the past.

Short addresses were made by Z. C. Hodges, Jr., of the Baptist Young Peoples Union; Merril L. Smith, of the Christian Endeavor; August Sperry, of the Episcopal Young People; L. E. McDougall, Jr., of the Epworth League; and Paul L. Brindle, of the Luther League, representatives of the cooperating organizations. Elgin Smith, president of the Columbia Federation of Baptist Young Peoples Union, presided. The Rev. Bernard A. Braskamp, pastor of the Gunton-Temple Memorial Presbyterian Church, gave the benediction.

Western Market Roof Repair Bids Are Sought

Bids for repair of the roof of Western Market to be opened November 15, were called for by the District yesterday.

The market almost went out of existence last year when the District Commissioners cut all items for its operation out of their estimates, when the Budget Bureau refused to approve for its repair. Thereupon Congress went over the head of the Budget Bureau and appropriated $35,000 for the new roof and other repairs.

Boy in Serious Condition After Being Hit by Auto

Fremont Davis, 13 years old, of 900 Eleventh street southeast, suffered injuries of the skull yesterday afternoon when he was struck by an automobile said by police to have been owned and driven by Daniel Johnson, 631 B street northeast. Davis, who was riding a bicycle at Virginia avenue and Sixth street northeast, was knocked down.

He was taken to Casualty Hospital in Johnson's car, where he was treated by Dr. Louis Jinal. His condition is serious.

Retirement of Dr. A. E. Miller Makes Rift in Notable Quartet

First of Four, in Bureau of Education 41 Years, to Reach 70.

When Dr. Allen E. Miller takes his hat from the rack and checks out of the United States Bureau of Education today he will be breaking up a notable quartet in the Government service.

Dr. Miller, one of four men who have worked in the bureau for 41 years and is the first of the four to reach the retirement age of 70. He and two of the others were appointed April 22, 1887, and the fourth was appointed the following day.

Miller's colleagues in the "Forty-one Year Club" are Louis A. Kalbach, 62, chief clerk of the bureau; James C. Boykin, 62, chief of the editorial division; and Dr. Henry R. Evans, 67, an assistant chief of that division. Dr. Miller also was an assistant to Mr. Boykin.

Three of the four men—Dr. Miller, Dr. Evans and Mr. Boykin—have worked virtually side by side throughout their long service, and Kalbach has always been within shouting distance of them.

Although Dr. Miller does not leave the service until today, he was given a formal send-off yesterday, when the officials and employees of the bureau gathered in the commissioner's office to see Kalbach present him with a traveling bag. He will use this bag in the near future when he and his family journey to Florida to spend the winter. Dr. Miller, who lives at 8315 Connecticut avenue, Chevy Chase, Md., studied medicine at the Jefferson Medical College in Pennsylvania, but never took a degree. He is a member of the American Association of Medical Editors, and is the author of "History of Conjurings and Magic," "Adventures in Magic," "The Old and the New Magic." He lives in the Westview Apartments.

Mr. Boykin is the editor of School Life, the official publication of the Bureau of Education. He is known as the

Printers Ask Union Headquarters Here

Workers to Have Typographical Home Office Moved
From Indianapolis.

The Columbia Typographical Union, No. 101, is conducting a vigorous campaign to bring the international headquarters of the organization, now located in Indianapolis, to this city. Resolutions petitioning the executive council of the international body to bring about the change have been adopted and forwarded to the governing body.

The headquarters have been located in Indianapolis since the organization of the body in 1867, but, according to the local union, in recent years considerable dissatisfaction with the location has been manifest.

The local points out that the National Capital rapidly is becoming the center for labor unions. It directs attention to the fact that the American Federation of Labor is located here, as are the electrical workers' machine, cigar makers, sheet metal workers and bricklayers' organizations.

Quash R. D. Vining Suit, Board Requests Court

Motion on behalf of the personnel classification board to quash the suit recently filed against it by R. D. Vining, of the Navy Department Supplies and Accounts Bureau, involving the board's refusal to accept the offer of $500,000, was taken under advisement yesterday by Justice Peyton Gordon, following arguments in the District Supreme Court.

Herbert S. Ward, counsel for Vining, contended that the board was attempting to usurp the functions of Cabinet officers, who, under the law, are the only ones who have the power to make promotions in the Federal service. He admitted the board had the right to allocate a position originally, but had no power over promotions thereafter. Vining, in his suit, complained that the board was interfering with his allocation to a higher grade, after Secretary of Navy Curtis D. Wilbur and the naval paymaster had approved promotion for him.

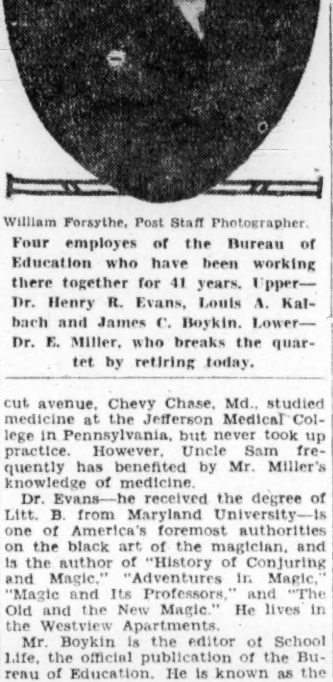

Planes in Next Arms Parley, Warner Holds

The next disarmament conference in 1931 may be held in Washington, according to a statement made by Assistant Secretary of the Navy for Aeronautics, Warner.

While the value of airplanes as naval auxiliaries has been recognized, their full military significance never has been determined, he said. Dirigibles at present could be used for scouting auxiliaries to fleets.

MICHELSON'S DOUBT OF EINSTEIN'S THEORY HEARD BY OPTICIANS

Assumptions for Hypothesis of Relativity Questioned by Chicago Scientist.

LACKS PROOF, HOWEVER, OF ETHER IN FIRMAMENT

Moving Pictures of Jupiter,
Eclipsed by Satellite,

Prof. A. A. Michelson, of the University of Chicago, yesterday afternoon took issue with the Einstein theory of relativity before a large audience of scientists gathered here from all parts of the United States for the annual convention of the Optical Society of America, which is being held at the Bureau of Standards.

The Einstein theory holds that there is no absolute motion and that ether is nonexistent. Dr. Michelson, however, is of the opinion that there is both ether in the boundless reaches of the sky and absolute motion. Einstein, he said, in evolving his theory of relativity reached correct results from incorrect assumptions.

After years of experimenting with his theory of the presence of ether, Dr. Michelson concludes that its existence never can be proved. The movement of radio and light waves, he pointed out, give evidence of a medium of propagation, but the Michelson-Morley tests which would have proved conclusively the existence of ether have shown negative results.

Despite the failure of these tests, Dr. Michelson still professes a belief in the presence of ether. He predicted that the proponents of Einstein would have to modify their theory in the future to reconcile the results with the assumptions.

"If there is no substance or medium for the transmission of light rays, how are the waves moved to the earth?" he asked.

Skeptical of Miller Findings.

Dr. Dayton C. Miller, of the Case School of Applied Science, Cleveland, Ohio, said that his experiments with the Michelson-Morley theory have proved the velocity of light to be constant in all directions. He said that the Michelson-Morley theory, however, expressed himself as skeptical of Dr. Miller's findings.

During the morning session the section witnessed a moving picture of the planet Jupiter. Prof. W. H. Wright, of the Lick Observatory, made the film. Dr. K. M. Black, of the National Research Laboratory, presented it to the society.

The film depicted the diversified surface of the planet and disclosed the movement of a satellite causing an eclipse like that with which the inhabitants of the earth are familiar. The sun and the moon passed between the sun and the earth.

Doctor Sued for $60,000 Because of Broken Arm

Dr. Aurelius R. Shands, widely known orthopedic specialist, of 901 Sixteenth street northwest, yesterday was named defendant in two damage suits, totaling $60,000, instituted by William B. McGregor and his son, William B. McGregor, Jr., both of Hyattsville, Md.

The younger McGregor complained that he employed Dr. Shands on September 21, 1927, to set his left arm, which was fractured by a fall from a building. The specialist, he declared, set the arm improperly. As a result, the younger McGregor declared, his arm had to be reset and now he is permanently deformed. He requested the court to grant him $50,000 damages. Damages of $10,000 were asked by the elder McGregor, who complained that he had undergone the expense of the operation upon his son.

CITIZENS LOSE SUIT TO HALT FIREHOUSE

Injunction Is Refused When

Designated Site.

FIGHT OVER ZONING PLAN ACTION AWAITS DETAILS

Residents in the vicinity of Sixteenth street and Colorado avenue northwest yesterday lost their legal battle to prevent the District Commissioners from locating a fire engine house on that corner. Justice Peyton Gordon, in equity division of the District Supreme Court, sustained a motion of District counsel and dismissed an injunction suit filed against the commissioners last Saturday by Henry I. Quinn, attorney, of 1507 Gallatin street northwest.

Five other property owners of the section joined Quinn before the hearing yesterday. They were Edwin H. and Rachael R. Bond, of 1516 Hamilton street; George J. Muller, Jr., 5200 R street; Henry Orth, Jr., 1510 Hamilton street; and Miss Caroline Orth, whose property is directly opposite the fire engine house site. Attorney George E. Sullivan, who appeared for the Bonds, and Mr. Quinn carried on the battle of the protests.

The residents contended that the zoning laws would be violated in the event the District Commissioners erected the engine house on the property, and further objected on the ground that the site is within the confines of Rock Creek Park, which was purchased by Congress to be used as a playground for the citizenry of the United States.

Jury Frees Man Struck By Club of Policeman

A jury in Police Court yesterday acquitted George Watson Hill of a charge of driving while drunk, choosing to believe apparently that the defendant was made "groggy" by a blow from a policeman's night stick rather than by liquor.

It was Hill's second trial. The first resulted in a conviction. Judge Robert E. Mattingly granted the second on the ground the blow might have been from a policeman's night stick rather than by liquor.

Ambulance Takes Man Who Called It to Police

William M. Brauner, 48 years old, of 624 E street northwest, called Emergency Hospital yesterday and asked that the ambulance be sent to that address for a patient.

The ambulance arrived. Dr. Rutkowski asked for the patient. Brauner replied that he was sick, suffering from pains around the heart. The doctor examined him, put him in the ambulance, and then took him to the First Precinct station, where he was charged with being intoxicated.

More Catholic Charities Funds Seen in Chest Plan

Improved Methods of Raising Cash and Group's Need for More Money Brought Affiliation, Gavan Tells Members—Allen Pope Elected President.

Designating the affiliation of the Catholic Charities with the Community Chest movement in this city as a "most important development," Joseph Gavan, a director of the former organization, last night outlined reasons for the alliance at the annual meeting of the executive committee at the Willard Hotel.

Improved methods of raising funds practiced by the Community Chest movement and increased demands upon the treasury of the Catholic group were deciding factors underlying the decision, he said. Mr. Gavan praised the hearty response of Catholic people to requests for aid in charitable causes. He said, however, that the Community Chest movement will provide more money for Catholic charities work than was raised under the former system.

Only on one occasion during the meeting was reference made to the antagonism which greeted earlier suggestions that the Catholic group cast its lot with the Community Chest. Dr. John O'Grady, director of Catholic Charities, in urging those interested to bend every effort to raise funds under the new plan, said:

"It felt there was a better method of raising funds for our organization. I am just as willing to work now in behalf of the chest as I was formerly

Open Sewer Near Webb School Is Investigated

Investigation of conditions about an open sewer excavation near the Webb School, at Fifteenth and Rosedale streets northeast, was begun yesterday by health department officials upon complaint of assistant Superintendent of Schools Robert L. Haycock.

Complaint about stagnant water lying in the hole, which is said to have been open for several weeks without any work being done, was made to school authorities yesterday by residents of the neighborhood and parents of children attending the school, which has been closed since the excavation was made.
